The Down Factory Store

Thanks to our retail and "online" customers we are one of the largest resources for goose down comforters, pillows and featherbeds. Consumers that compare our quality and prices to those of department stores, discounters, catalogs and other web sites find that we are indeed unbeatable - and we guarantee that! Know the facts of down before you buy.

FACT: Down comes from the chest of the bird to keep it insulated from the weather. Feathers (those things with quills) come from the back of the bird to keep it dry. Down can cost as much as $10.00 an ounce, feathers 10¢ an ounce. Over 90% of down manufacturers find it to their advantage to add over 30% feathers to their down. It's like buying three pounds of ground sirloin and getting two pounds of meat and one pound of fat. You have paid for meat and got fat, it's the same with their down, they both do it because it's legal. We do not contaminate our down by adding feathers to it.

KNOW THE FACTS BEFORE YOU BUY IT

FACT: Fill power, this is the amount the cubic inches filled by one ounce of down. Higher fill power means a higher quality down. You will find that as the quality of the down increases, so does the comfort & life of the item.

FACT: We use only high thread count, baffle box construction, 100% cotton covers on our down comforters & pillows. Down insulates by trapping air and holding in your body temperature, keeping you comfortable through the night. Low quality comforters are usually heavier because it takes more of an inferior down to fill a comforter. Inferior down becomes clumpy and it can't breath, resulting in your becoming over heated and uncomfortable. Our high quality down gives you the warmth and comfort without the weight.

FACT: In all likelihood you will have your com-

Gates Found

Huge Gates That Once Closed Across The Sunrise Highway At Shinnecock To Halt The Tourist Flow Will Be Auctioned Off This July In Southampton

By Dan Rattiner

The huge metal gates that once stood across the Sunrise Highway at the Shinnecock Canal have been found. They are now in the possession of a well known Southampton antiques dealer, Fred Leighton, who intends to have them on display in his two story studio on Jobs Lane before this month is out, to be sold to the highest bidder.

"I believe these huge gates are priceless," Leighton said. "There has been nothing like them in this country before or since. They are one of a kind."

The gates, which weigh over 2000 pounds each, were put up across the Sunrise Highway in 1971 when the crowds of people who come out to the Hamptons every day in the summertime began to come out in what was then believed to be excessive numbers. They were designed by the great Phillipine sculptor Marcos Blatt, who, earlier in his career, designed three of the newest gates that either prevent or allow people access through the Great Wall of China.

Blatt made four different designs for the gates at Shinnecock, the sketches of which were presented to the Southampton Gate Committee. The accepted design were gates of iron which Blatt designed to resemble the giant gates in the 1936 movie King Kong. The project was accepted in the spring of 1970, the expected cost of $3.8 million raised privately in the Hamptons, and, as mentioned, the gates, now officially dubbed The Gates of Shinnecock, finished and put in place just before Memorial Day of 1971.

Hordes of vacationers carrying banners reading FREEDOM TO TRAVEL and READ THE CONSTITIUTION came through without permission to the beaches....

The gates worked very effectively and without controversy for four years. Gatekeepers would open them at 6 a.m. to 10 a.m. in the mornings, and then from 5 to 8 p.m. in the evenings. The same hours were kept on the weekend, and for those not familiar with the situation, there was sometimes a wait of six or seven hours for the next re-opening. As expected, many vacationers simply turned around and went somewhere else, rather than wait that amount of time. The population and traffic situation in the Hamptons for those few years after 1971 was serene and peaceful.

In 1975, however, traffic jams caused by vacationers at the canal were backing up four and five miles. On July 6 of that year, the gatekeepers arrived at 6 a.m. to open the gates to find that they were already open, because someone with a blowtorch had simply ripped them off their hinges.

The gates were put back on, naturally, and there

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Dennis Tito, the millionaire who paid the Russians $20 million to be shot into space two weeks ago, was in New York on Monday, dining at Fresco. Perhaps he'll head out to the Hamptons for the summer. It's just forty eight-seconds from Manhattan.

Worth magazine says median income in Southampton is $587,500 while median income in East Hampton is $977,500. Donald Trump keeps looking but doesn't buy anything out here. It could throw either village over the $1 million mark.

Princess Arianna von Hohenhole, who's been summering in the Hamptons for many years, will be marrying Wall Street millionaire Dixon Boardman in Marbella next month.

Christie Brinkley and Peter Cook will be hosting this year's Cours d'Elegance antique car show in Bridgehampton this weekend. An award to the car owner for the "Best Story I've Been Told So Far Today" will be given out by Dan Rattiner of Dan's Papers who will be wandering around among the car owners all morning before the awards ceremony. The stories don't have to be true. Maybe.

Denise Rich of Southampton, the ex of pardoned fugitive Marc Rich, is to be paid $9,000 for a walk on role in HBO's The Sopranos.

Marty Richards of Southampton was honored recently at an awards dininer in Manhattan benefiting the Children's Hearing Instutute.

East Hampton's Jerry Seinfeld is helping develop a comedy pilot entitled "Lunatic Theatre" being put together by his former writing partner Barry Marder.

Maria Cooper Janis and Byron Janis, who play a pivotal role in the ongoing Hamptons Music Fesival every summer, will be conducting a workshop in Havana, Cuba next week about his upcoming musical The Hunchback of Notre Dame…

* * *

Don't miss the first event of the new summer season (they all say that), which is the 23rd annual Dan's Papers Potatohampton Minithon this Saturday morning. The gun will be fired at 9:30 a.m. in Bridgehampton and the 1,000 or so runners follow a 10K a route through the potato fields,

CORRECTION:

In the Day-By-Day listing of our previous issue (May 18), we incorrectly attributed the author of the play Nighthawks, which was given a reading at Canio's Books in Sag Harbor. The author is Edward Padula of Bridgehampton. Our apologies to Mr. Padula.

Take the Challenge!

On Saturday, September 15, 2001, join hundreds of dedicated people who will become heroes in the fight against hate crimes and HIV/AIDS. You'll ride 100 miles from South Street Seaport in Manhattan to Southampton College on the East End of Long Island. The Challenge will be an intense and life-changing experience that will push your physical and emotional limits. This event will alter the way you greet other challenges and will make a significant difference in the lives of those in need.

It's only one day, but this could become the century you'll never forget.

GIVE YOUR CHILD A HEALTHY SMILE

Many parents don't realize how early dental problems can occur, or just how important those "baby teeth" are!

Prolonged and frequent bottle or breast feeding can cause baby bottle tooth decay. Diets high in sugar from fruit roll-ups, sticky candies, juice and soda can also cause lots of cavities. Thumb and pacifier habits can cause malformations of the palate.

Children are not done losing their baby teeth until they are 12-13 years old! These teeth hold the spaces for permanent teeth, shape your child's face, and help with speech, eating and chewing.

Dr. Nancy Cosenza specializes in dentistry for children from infancy to their teenage years. At Hampton Pediatric Dental Associates, we know that not only children, but their teeth, are entirely different from adults. In fact, pediatric dentists require 2 years' additional training and education beyond dental school!

(There are only 5,000 pediatric dentists in the U.S., and we're the only pediatric dental practice in the Hamptons!)

Dr. Janet Stoess-Allen, our orthodontist, believes in early orthodontic intervention for those children who will clearly benefit from it. Early treatment presents the opportunity to influence jaw growth in a positive manner, lower risk of trauma to protruded upper incisors, correct harmful oral habits, and improve esthetics and self-esteem!

Our office is colorfully painted and cheerfully designed - a definite "kid-friendly" environment. Our staff is genuinely warm and cheerful too!

Call us at (631) 287-8687 if you have any questions or would like to arrange an appointment.

Remember that good dental habits and experiences started in childhood will last a lifetime! We know how to make kids leave the dentist's chair smiling — and their parents, too!

Fortunately, Buzz's friends talked him out of his original design for his new dealership.

No one ever accused Buzz Chew of lacking unique ideas.

So Buzz's family, staff, builder and architects were ready when planning began on his new Chevrolet-Oldsmobile-Cadillac building in Southampton. Buzz showed up at the first meeting bristling with concepts and creativity. He'd even done a few sketches in chalk on the back of an old mud flap.

Among the inspirations Buzz cited were the Taj Mahal, Buckingham Palace and Graceland. Someone suggested that Buzz was spending too much time in Vegas.

We're happy to report that reason prevailed. The new Buzz Chew building is flat-out gorgeous, truly a state-of-the-art dealership. Even better, it's designed to be efficient and customer-friendly in dozens of innovative ways you'll find no where else on Long Island. Because in the end, Buzz didn't just build this new facility for himself. He did it for you.

Stop by and see for yourself.

We are pleased that Sherry-Lehmann's chairman, Michael Aaron, received the prestigious Retailer of the Year Award from Beverage Dynamics.

Rated NY's #1 Wine Merchant

SHERRY-LEHMANN

679 Madison Avenue (at 61st Street) 212-838-7500

Bacchus never had it so good: top-rated for quality, the "Rolls-Royce" of wine shops boasts "the city's deepest selection of expensive wines, including older Bordeaux," and "if you get the right salesperson" and it's not "crowded," shopping in this "well-appointed" East Side space can make you feel "to the manner born;" run by the Aaron family since shortly after Prohibition, it pioneered the mail-order business and has such an "incredible selection" that only part of it is on display, so if you don't see what you want, ask.

The New, Better Than Ever, BALD EAGLE Is Back

The delicious Bald Eagle wines have returned to Sherry-Lehmann and they are better than ever! They have been expanded to include two new varietals, a soft, fruity Merlot and a crisp, refreshing Sauvignon Blanc*. Chosen from some of the best vineyard soil of California, these new Bald Eagle selections provide the ideal solution for those who want true California varietal flavor at modest cost.*

In addition, Sherry-Lehmann will continue the tradition started almost 20 years ago. For each bottle of Bald Eagle wine sold, Sherry-Lehmann will make a contribution to The Audubon Society of New York State to help protect endangered species.

Red Wine

BALD EAGLE CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1999

BALD EAGLE MERLOT 1999
Here is a soft, round and supple example of Merlot exuberance. Bing cherry flavors and charming character. (4307)

White Wine

BALD EAGLE CHARDONNAY 1999
Buttery, ripe tropical fruit suggestive of lemon, pineapple and pears place this dry and pleasing Chardonnay in a class of its own. (4308)

BALD EAGLE SAUVIGNON BLANC 1999

BALD EAGLE SAMPLER $107.40
Twelve Bottles - Can't decide which Bald Eagle wine is your favorite? Then choose the Bald Eagle Sampler, consisting of three bottles of each of the four wines listed here! (6635)

Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special of Lucas Carton

FROM ALAIN SENDERENS

Alain Senderens, the renowned chef of Paris' famed restaurant Lucas Carton, explains: "In 1993, when I met my good friend Paul-Francois Vranken, I asked him to create a special cuvée of Champagne that I would be proud to serve to the guests of Lucas Carton. After much research M. Vranken created Champagne Demoiselle Reserve Special Lucas Carton.

THE TASTE

It is a very dry Champagne that imparts a buttery flavor on the palate and it was created to be consumed with the cuisine of my beloved restaurant." (1140)

$26.95 Bottle On Sale $323.40 Case

LEARN FILMMAKING

AT THE MOST INNOVATIVE AND DYNAMIC FILM SCHOOL IN THE WORLD

WE BELIEVE IN IMMERSING OUR STUDENTS IN THE ART OF FILMMAKING IMMEDIATELY. FROM THE FIRST DAY OUR STUDENTS GET BEHIND THE CAMERA AND LEARN BY DOING. BY THE END OF THE FIRST WEEK THEY ARE DIRECTING THEIR OWN FILMS.

CURRICULUM

The most intensive and thorough hands-on filmmaking program of any school in the world where each individual student will write, shoot, direct, and edit her or his own short 16mm films. We offer 4, 6, 8-week, & one-year programs, summer and year round.

EQUIPMENT

Well over 200 Arriflex 16mm cameras, and over 150 digital and Steenbeck editing stations, a ratio of equipment to students that cannot be matched anywhere.

INSTRUCTION

Instructors are active filmmakers with Masters Degrees from NYU, USC, UCLA, Harvard, Stanford, and Columbia University. Students consistently describe them as "inspirational" in their evaluations.

All workshops are solely owned and operated by the New York Film Academy and not affiliated with Universal Studios or Disney-MGM studios was no further trouble, although there was much yelling and cursing and the police seemed always to have to be there to keep order, until August 11 of that year when there occurred what has come to be known as the Great Gate Rebellion. At noon on that day, the gates were once again torn off their hinges, thrown aside, and hordes of vacationers carrying banners reading FREEDOM TO TRAVEL and READ THE CONSTITUTION came through without permission to the beaches of Southampton and East Hampton. Three people were killed during that rebellion and the more than 250 injured strained the facilities at Southampton Hospital. The next day, meeting in emergency session, The Southampton Town Board, together with the Southampton Gate Committee, reluctantly decided that a search take place to find the gates. They did not agree on whether the gates, if found, should be put back up, since one faction said it was clearly too dangerous and emotional a time to consider such a thing. The Committee voted to table that issue. But the fact was that the gates were never found. And so they have never been put back up. Therefore, passage today, as you know, is free to everyone coming across the bridge over the Shinnecock Canal.

Although the gates remained lost for these past twenty six years – they were believed to have been carried off by crowds of angry but victorious rebels – there was also the lingering question of who, if they were found, could claim ownership of them. The gates had been ordered and paid for by a non-profit organization, which could, presumably, lay claim to their ownership. But that organization, the Southampton Gate Committee, no longer exists.

Another claim to the gates could be made by the Federal Government, since the Sunrise Highway is part of the Federal Highway System, but all the Federal Government did, back in 1971 was agree to allow the gates to be mounted on the hinged steel posts that had been built by the state for that purpose on the shoulders of the road.

(Calls to the United States Federal Highway Administration Director requesting comment, however, were not returned.)

Still another claim, although a weaker one, could be made by the many volunteers who manned the gates – there was a sign up listing more than five hundred strong for that purpose – and who are still around. Many of them remember the gates and what fun it was to climb up on top of them when they were closed and throw potatoes down at the vacationers. At ten p.m., almost every night, there would be a big party up there, complete with a banjo band, and the local people would serenade the vacationers with such songs as "Foggy Mountain Breakdown," "You Are My Sunshine" and "Wabash Cannonball."

Leighton believes, however, that at this point in time, twenty six years later, the gates are his.

"I have checked with numerous lawyers," he said. "All agree. They were essentially thrown away, as trash in the woods along the sides of the road. They were not carted off by angry vacationers as had previously been thought. They have been in the woods all this time, junked and rusting and of no value to anyone, available as first come first serve."

In other words, all those people since 1974 who have driven across the Shinnecock Canal Bridge and have said I wish they would put a gate across it were, all this time, only a few hundred yards from the gates that had at one time actually been doing just that.

Leighton will not say who it was that finally found them. But he did say that this person had gone to the trouble of hauling them out of the woods with chains and an auto wrecker, had kept them against the back of his garage in Sagaponack, and had only recently sold them to Leighton for

Oh My God They've Installed A Roundabout At Ferry Road And Long Beach Road

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, every resident of the Village of Sag Harbor and the Village of North Haven received a letter in the mail from the New York State Department of Transportation containing a leaflet entitled ROUNDABOUTS: GENERAL INFORMATION AND STEP BY STEP INSTRUCTION. “Upon approaching the roundabout, stay to the right of the median island and SLOW DOWN to 10-15 mph,” is rule number one in the section for motorists. There is a section for bicyclists and there is also a section for pedestrians. “PROCEED around the roundabout on the sidewalk or shoulder and in the designated crossways. Never walk in the roundabout or to the central island,” is instruction number one for pedestrians. Instruction four reads “Some vehicles will use their right-turn signal, but some won't. Proceed carefully.”

> REMEMBER! Circulating vehicles have the right of way. All vehicles circulate counterclockwise. Roundabouts are designed to accomodate large vehicles.

Most of the people in these two villages, upon receiving this missive, turned it over and over, looking for some sort of new thing that might explain why they got such an exhaustive explanation about a roundabout. After all, it was about a roundabout.

Indeed, there is a new roundabout in this community, located north across the bridge that connects Sag Harbor and North Haven up about a half mile, at what used to be the corner of Ferry Road and Long Beach Road. In the old days — until a month ago — there used to be a traffic light at this corner. Now there is a roundabout. You drive up Ferry Road, around the roundabout, and either head down Long Beach Road or further up Ferry Road to the, uh, Ferry.

I suppose that there were some people here in Sag Harbor and North Haven that looked further down into the envelope from the Department of Transportation, to see if there were instructions on how to use the Ferry to Shelter Island. (Drive your car onto the ferry at the point where the ferry is tied up to the dock. Otherwise you could splash into the Bay.) No. There weren't.

It is hard to imagine the flurry of activity that must have gotten underway in Albany when the word came down from the State House that the leaflet on roundabouts was to be sent to every resident of Sag Harbor and North Haven.

"Alright everybody listen up," the chief must have said to all the bureaucrats in the Nelson Rockefeller Leaflet Building on the State Campus when the order was received. He's standing on a chair at one end of the sorting room.

"DOT tells me the roundabout will open a week from next Thursday in Sag Harbor," the chief says. That doesn't give us much time. Let's get cracking."

"They're putting a roundabout in dunderhead country?" someone shouts.

Everyone snickers.

That's what they call the East End. Dunderhead country.

Now, the employees of the leaflet building spring to life. Coffee cups are put down, crossword puzzles are left half completed, trashy novels are bookmarked and shoved into desk drawers.

Where's the directory of taxpayers? How many people have we got in Sag Harbor anyway? Where is North Haven?

Instructions are shouted across the hall. File drawers are opened. Stamping machines plugged in and cranked up. Messages sent down to the warehouse for a delivery of 200 boxes of form number R-46, to be delivered to the leaflet building toot sweet.

"Lets go people. The East Enders have to learn how to use this thing. We don't want any car crashes."

Of course, they missed the deadline. The traffic roundabout opened on April 20. The leaflets arrived in everybody's mailboxes, about 3,000 of them, at taxpayers' expense, on May 4.

As roundabouts go, by the way, it's pretty good. It's got a kind of curved cobblestone border going around it. There's a lot of new painted white lines and signs coming into it and going out of it, it's even got two well marked bicycle lanes, one on each side of Ferry Road, with rumble strips separating the traffic lanes from the bike lanes. (It's also got pictures of a man on a bicycle painted on the pavement, sort of like what they do with chalk after there has been an accident, in case you don't get that this is a bicycle lane.)

Everything went just fine with the roundabout from the moment they cut the ribbon opening it to the public on April 20, until May 5, the day after the arrival of the leaflets. The traffic came up, flowed around, continued on its way.

But beginning on May 5, and continuing on to this very day, there is a traffic disaster up by the roundabout as motorists, pedestrians and bicyclists, having pulled over to the side, have continued with their studies of all the various instructions in the new leaflet.

"Enter the roundabout when there is a sufficient gap. All traffic is moving in a counter clockwise direction."

"Remember to be prepared to stop if there is not a sufficient gap in circulating traffic."

"BICYCLISTS: The same laws that apply to motorists, with some obvious exceptions, apply to bicyclists. Bicyclists should proceed as motorists. Refer to directions for motorists."

"Do not hug curb."

"PEDESTRIANS: When crossing an exit lane, LOOK TO YOUR RIGHT for vehicles leaving the roundabout. PROCEED CAREFULLY."

Panel number 7 of the leaflet is a kind of summation of all the stuff that has been written from panels 1 to 6.

"REMEMBER! Circulating vehicles have the right of way. All vehicles circulate counter clockwise. Roundabouts are designed to accommodate large vehicles, including fire trucks."

This covers that part of the Sag Harbor and North Haven population who suffer from short term memory loss and might have finished with Panel Number 6 (entitled GENERAL OPERATING PRINCIPLES) but forgotten what they had read in Panels 1 to 5. And in the next minute, Panel 6.

This week, the State Assembly in Albany is debating whether to issue an order instructing the team at the Nelson Rockefeller Leaflet Building to send a leaflet to Sag Harbor residents advising them of the importance of bringing their cars to a complete halt upon reaching the end of Long Wharf.

(Where is your car's brake? How to use it. What it does. Using your car's inflatable air bag as a life raft.)

This newspaper will have the results of this important vote next issue. Remember, you read it first in Dan's Papers. ●

Fade To Black

The Real Issue Is Whether The Blackouts And Brownouts Coming Will Be Contrived

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, our president, a former Texas oilman, standing with his vice-president, a former Wyoming oilman, made a speech in which he announced that, sadly, due to the negligence of the Clinton administration, the supply of energy had fallen way behind demand and it would be immediately necessary to drill for more oil and build new power plants.

That one is naturally suspicious of such a statement, given where it is coming from, is certainly understandable. That there will be brownouts and blackouts is another matter.

Twenty years ago, Dan's Papers bought one of the very early IBM computers to run its accounting department. Prior to that time, everything was done by hand – billing, ledger books, orders and so forth. But since computers were the coming thing, and Dan's Papers was always on the leading edge of publishing technology and proud of it, we decided to take the plunge. It turned out to be a very deep plunge.

The problem hinged on two particular situations that came together at the same time. One of them was that this early computer, with eight inch floppies, five inch black and white screen and 32K of memory for those who might be interested, required that you keep it on all night.

"The operator changes all the data during the day," the IBM salesman told us. "And then at night, while you are home sleeping, the computer sorts all the data and puts it where it is scheduled to go. We call this night work the 'sort.' You come in at 8 a.m. and your IBM is all sorted and reorganized and ready for the new day."

My prediction? We will have brownouts and blackouts this summer... and we will scramble to open environmentally protected land...

The other situation back in 1980 was that the citizens of Long Island were at war with their lighting company. LILCO had proposed a series of three nuclear plants. They said the energy needs of Long Island were such that we would be running out of power if these plants were not built. One was already under construction at Shoreham – with demonstrators waving posters, climbing fences and lying in front of bulldozers – and the other two, planned for Jamesport, were on the drawing board.

It was quite a struggle. Those opposed said that besides their opposition to nuclear waste, they did not want something that, if it were to blow up, would require the evacuation of the island. Evacuating the island was impossible.

LILCO, meanwhile, said that their power supply was being stretched to the limit. In fact, right then and there for the summer they announced that there would be brownouts and blackouts. Long Island was in big trouble. The only alternative would be to allow the nuclear plants to be built.

And so Long Island and the East End suffered through two awful summers of brownouts and blackouts, some of them coming at the rate of two or three a day (or night) – until the war between LILCO and the citizenry ended. Eventually, LILCO lost this war. The power plants were never built. At which time, amazingly, the blackouts and brownouts ended.

How could this be? Shouldn't things have just gotten worse? At this point, disgraceful bits of information came out, revealed by former LILCO employees. LILCO management had manipulated the situation to create the blackouts. They had done this to break their opposition. It had failed. And now there was nothing more to be said.

I have an utterly outrageous memory of this business. Every morning we'd come to work. And every morning we would discover that, because of a blackout – they were never scheduled – our IBM machine had scrambled the data. It was so awful that when we realized this was going to go on for quite some time, we went back to paper, pens and pencils to run our business. I filed a lawsuit about this. But as often happens with this sort of thing, it dragged on and on for several years after which I settled for a nominal sum that included a statement that those I sued had done nothing wrong. Perhaps the bitterest pill was that by the time this happened, the IBM computer was not only completely paid for but completely obsolete. We just chucked it in the dumpster, barely used.

They say as you get older, you get more cynical. There's truth to this, and surely it lies in the story told above.

My prediction? We will have brownouts and blackouts this summer and next and we will scramble to open environmentally protected land to exploration and build new refineries and powerplants and the crisis will gradually fade away.

The problem will last either four or eight years, depending on whether George W. gets re-elected. ●

Argument In Car About Who Is To Drive Takes A Turn For The Worse

By Dan Rattiner

On Tuesday night, Chris Wooton walked to the driver's side of his car in the parking lot in Riverhead, got in and put the key in the ignition. He waited until his wife had gotten in the other side, then turned the key, cranked the motor and waited until the engine had roared to life.

"You shouldn't be driving," his wife said. "You've had too much to drink."

Chris disagreed. He felt perfectly fine, he told her. And so he pulled out of the parking lot into the street and headed down Route 24, which connects Riverhead with Hampton Bays, their home town.

It is only six miles down this road to Hampton Bays, but within a mile, the two were having words with one another, the topic continuing to be whether or not Chris was fit to drive.

"I'll show you that I am fit to drive," Chris said. He had put on the car's right blinker.

"What are you doing?"

"I am going to go in here and take a breathalizer test," Chris said.

There on the right side of the road, as it has always been, and as many of us have slowed down in order to pass at a stately rate, is the New York State Police Headquarters and Barracks. Chris pulled in. And he came to a halt there in a parking space, and continued to have words with his wife, who at this point was not only telling him he was unfit to drive, but also that he was stupid to have pulled into the State Police Headquarters. "I am going to have a breathalyzer test," Chris said. "You'll see. You'll flunk the test," his wife argued. I know when you've had too much to drink. You'll FLUNK it." The argument got louder.

From the perspective inside the police department, it looked a bit different. Outside, parked there in the darkness in a spot that was supposed to be reserved for the chief, there was now a car in which a man and a woman could clearly be heard arguing with one another, although about what they could not hear. There was some talk that what was going on might be a physical altercation. But southofthehighway?

By Dan Rattiner

What do designer Betsy Johnson, actor Alec Baldwin, hip- hop impressario Puffy Combs, TV personality Katlean de Monchy, Shinnecock Hills Golf Club President Elliot Vose and billionaire Fairfield Sampson, London Jewelers Mark Udell and Jennifer Grant, the daughter of Cary Grant and Dyan Cannon, all have in common? They are all, vertantly or inadvertently, a part of the first edition of the new magazine from Dan's Papers entitled Southof-theHighway.

SouthoftheHighway is stunningly beautiful, oversize, full color and filled with everything you might want to know about living South of the Highway. During 2001, it appears weekly between Memorial Day and Labor Day and it is the centerpiece of the issue of Dan's Papers you are reading. Featured are the most expensive houses ever offered for sale south of the highway ($50 million), a unique column from Betsey Johnson who conducts offbeat interviews with her designer friends, an introduction to a "secret place" in the Hamptons, what's hot in fashion from Katlean de Monchy, even a wild sit-com about the mythical billionaire Sampson family, Fairfield, Alison, Jennifer and Willie. (Or is it mythical?)

There's lots more and you'll read it yourself in the first issue of SouthoftheHighway debuting Memorial Day weekend.

You will find SouthoftheHighway tucked into every issue of Dan's Papers this summer. Dan's Papers is considered by many to be the bible of the Hamptons and the East End. SouthoftheHighway, which will share its 71,000 circulation, will therefore from its outset be the largest glossy magazine ever circulated on the East End, with its focus on the Hamptons,(particularly the South of the Highway part of the Hamptons,) the rest of the East End and Manhattan.

The launch party for the premier issue of SouthoftheHighway will take place from 7 to 9 p.m. on Saturday May 26, at London Jewelers', at 1 Main Street in East Hampton. There will be a runway fashion show by Betsey Johnson, a special "anniversary" drink by Cointreau, a simultaneous celebration of the 75th anniversary of this landmark jewelry store, and other surprises. The $25 admission charge will benefit the Child Development Center of the Hamptons. ●

it didn't seem that way. Yet, anyway.

A team of officers was organized, and within minutes, they had arrived at the car, opened the driver's door and had pulled out Chris Wooton, age 29, and told him to raise his hands and face the car. Chris now yelled at the police. It was HE who wanted to drive into the parking lot. It was HE who wanted to take a breathalizer test to prove to his wife that...well, they didn't want to hear it. They maneuvered him against the car and frisked him, which only made him angrier. He struggled with them.

"This is not my fault," he said.

Chris Wooton was taken into the police station and after some shouting back and forth was given the breathalizer test that he requested, and flunked. He was then charged with driving while intoxicated, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest, then handcuffed, and taken down the hall to one of the holding cells where he was to remain until morning when he could be arraigned before a judge.

Mrs. Wooton was alarmed. "What are you doing to him?" she asked.

The police told her.

"Well, what about me and the car?" she asked.

"Drive home," they told her. "And come back in the morning. You won the argument."

Indeed she had. ●

Mistaken Identity

That First Summer In Southampton When I Really Wasn't A Jewel Thief

By Jerry Cimisi

As the frantic summer season gets under way, it brings to mind my first summer here. It was in Southampton, 1977. I was introduced to the unique beauty of the Hamptons. And I was nearly arrested as a jewel thief.

Before I talk about the jewel thief business I have to tell you how I nearly got arrested in a case of mistaken identity that spring. That earlier event very much has the character of the later one.

I hadn't come out to the Hamptons just for the summer, but to stay, year round. Though perhaps I didn't know that would be the case at the time. At any rate, I moved to Southampton from Queens in April.

> "There were some FBI agents over the house," the man said. "They were undercover – wearing Hawaiian shirts. They looked ridiculous."

And I have to tell you about my dogs first, as they very prominently figure in these stories. I had three dogs then, Garnet, Brandy and Little Jock. Garnet was a big, moody (meaning sometimes he scared people), reddish-brown dog, half Chesapeake Bay Retriever. Brandy was a light brown, small-medium collie mix, very friendly. Little Jock, named after his father Jock, was a medium-large black lab-mix. He tended to be a little skittish.

I lived right by Agawam Park in Southampton, in an apartment on top of the building that is now the Southampton Town Cultural Center. I'd walk my dogs around the area. It was 1977 and pretty dead those April nights. I was on Ox Pasture Road one night with the dogs. It was, I'd say, between ten and eleven.

A police car pulls up alongside me. An officer in late middle age, beefy faced, who seemed the stereotype of the oldtime Irish cop, starts questioning me suspiciously. Actually, I couldn't see his face until he moved the glaring beam of the flashlight from my face.

"What are you doing?"

"I'm walking my dogs," I said, saying I thought what was plainly obvious.

"Somebody just escaped from jail here," he said. "You look like him. You have any ID?"

I had a sinking feeling. "Not on me. It's back at my place."

"Get in. I'll take you there."

"What about my dogs?" The dogs had, all three, just parked themselves by the car, supremely, amazingly well-behaved. I had been walking them without a leash. The cop hadn't said anything about that.

"Let them get in the back," he said.

This was getting absurd. So my three dogs piled in the back, thinking this was a fun car ride and I got in next to the cop and in a few minutes we were at my place and without invitation the officer follows me, very deliberately casting his flashlight back and forth, expecting to find I knew not what. Being innocent, I did not make any objection to his entry.

I had just moved in and the place was a bit of a jumble – and I could not find my wallet. It figured. "Well, I've got this library card from the city…" I said worriedly.

He examined the card. He examined some library books I had – as if he were examining stolen property.

Finally he said, "You really look like that guy…. Let me call my partner. He can tell for sure."

By this point I am convinced I am going to be arrested in a case of mistaken identity and I'm worried about what is going to happen to the dogs. I had put them in another room while the cop had probed around.

The beefy cop goes outside to his car, comes back in. "He'll be right over."

The second officer is younger, and, I immediately felt, not as suspicious. He gave me a glance and said, "No, that's not him."

But my immediate wash of relief was quickly stayed, when the older cop said, indicating me, "He's got dogs."

"Oh, yeah," said the other cop. "The guy we're looking for has a dog. Where are they?"

I'm in a story by Kafka. First I had to be ID'd, now, the dogs. I open the door, the dogs come out, and, just as they had acted very proper when the first officer had stopped me outside, now they are also calm, and, in fact, very happy looking. They don't know they are in a line up.

The second cop studies them a minute. Am I going to have to raise bail?

"No," he says, "that's none of them."

So we're both cleared. The police leave and I believe I am now free of the law as the season comes on in the Hamptons – but, of course, I am mistaken.

Here's what happened. July comes and a jewel thief is robbing the homes of the rich and well-to-do. He's a cat burglar type, apparently gaining entrance to upper floor bedroom windows, and making off with jewelry worth not merely tens of thousands of dollars but, literally hundreds of thousands.

In conversation with a middle aged gentleman who was telling me about the stuffiness of the Meadow Club ("The only Jew they have is Dr. Scholl and nobody talks to him anyway") he related that his mother, who was apparently loaded, had just been robbed of a huge sum of jewelry – and in clichéd fashion directed her suspicions at the maid and had fired her.

"There were some FBI agents over the house," the man said. "They were undercover – wearing Hawaiian shirts. They looked ridiculous. I guess that's what they figure people wear around here."

By mid-summer the authorities were really going nuts trying to catch this cat burglar. Every evening I walked my dogs a police car passed us. Many of them stopped and questioned me. What was I doing? Walking my dogs, obviously. I didn't think a cat burglar was going to commit his crimes with the aid of three dogs.

I don't know how many times police officers took down my name and address. I took a lesson from my experience in the spring and always made sure I carried ID. Then it got to the point where a police car slowed down, checked me out and then went on its way, the officer inside certainly saying to himself, Oh, that's the dogwalker.

But my name and address had been taken by so many officers I really feared a search of my premises. Not that I had anything to hide, but my near arrest that spring (I wonder if they ever caught the guy I supposedly looked like) did not leave me confident that some absurd mistake might be made and I would be locked up for no reason at all.

Well, things went on that way. By the latter half of August, there were police cars everywhere at night. (In New York, you might recall, the authorities had their own, more serious manhunt: for the serial killer, who called himself the Son of Sam. He was arrested that August as he was planning to go and case a disco in the Hamptons.) But despite the increased police presence, the cat burglar still made off with his valuable booty. You had to give the guy a grudging respect. He was a professional. He always seemed to know that his victims were not at home. It was speculated that he was one of the bluebloods who knew just when this gala or this party was on and who would be going to it. Well, it certainly wasn't me, a newly

Mother Of Hampton Bays Drowning Victim Mark Legotti Wants To Reopen The Case

By Susan Simm

Susann Legotti-Ashraf, mother of Mark Legotti, the 16-year old Hampton Bays resident who was missing between March 10 and April 16 after last being seen in a rowboat on Tiana Bay, seeks "an accounting of events that took place during the three to four hour time period when Mark and his friend, Kenneth 'K.T.' Tofty, rowed off in a boat between 5:30 p.m. and when K.T. reached shore in East Quogue at about 9 p.m."

Jason Carson, a senior at Hampton Bays High School, called the police from his home in the Smith Creek area... "after hearing cries for help coming from the direction of the water between 9-9:30 p.m."

Ms. Ashraf asked the Southampton Town Police to re-open the case after learning that the autopsy report showed that Mark's two front teeth were missing upon examination.

"According to my dentist, the front two teeth are the hardest in terms of enamel and also in terms of surrounding tissue. He doesn't believe that the tissue would have decomposed enough to cause just the two front teeth to fall out. Until I saw this report, I had no idea that the teeth were missing. The body had undergone some decomposition and had lost weight but the teeth just didn't make sense to me," said Susann.

There is also a question of whether the boys actually made a landfall other than the sandbar K.T. mentions in his statement to police. Whether or not the boys entered the boat a second time is, as a result, unclear. Susann saw K.T. after searching the bay on the Shinnecock Star, shortly before Mark's body was found, and "he told me that they were only on land for five minutes," said Susann. "How could two teenage boys survive from 5 or 6 to 9 p.m. with water and air temperatures both in the 30s?"

How long were the boys actually in the boat versus on shore? Several witnesses place the boys on the East Quogue beach, near the Tiana Bay Association on Old Field Lane, at 5 p.m., shortly before they pushed off from shore.

Tomas DiBenedetto, a friend of both Mark and K.T.'s, gives this account: "We left my house about 4:30 p.m. and we arrived at the beach about 10 minutes later. There's this club that looks abandoned (Tiana Bay Association) and there was a boat there, tied to a metal stake in the ground. The boat was made of aluminum and was upside down on the beach. We flipped the boat over and underneath it were two oars, I remember that because Mark and

K.T. were sword fighting with them before they went out in the boat. They said that they were just going to go out and come back in. I sat on the shore for a little while after they went out. They did say that it was filling up with a little bit of water but Mark said that it's nothing, don't worry about it. I guess they didn't notice the plug. K.T. has since said that they later landed on a sandbar or maybe a small island. It may have had some grass or something on it, but he didn't say how long they were on land."

According to K.T.'s statement given to police, he and Mark decided to row over to Mark's girlfriend, Jade Androcci's, house and then changed their minds and started to row over to another friend's, Adam Lester, because he lives on the water in the Rampasture area. K.T. told police that he didn't notice the hole (for drainage) until after they had been rowing for awhile and if they stopped moving, the water would come in. They kept going until the waves got bigger and the wind picked up. Eventually, the boat filled with water and, according to the statement, they flipped it over and tried to climb on top of it but were unable to. After swimming for about 15 minutes, they found a sandbar and walked for a while but it eventually ran out and they were back in the water. Although trying to stay in contact, Mark fell behind and K.T. stopped hearing his replies. K.T. made landfall back in East Quogue and managed to get up to back door of a house on Indian Run Road. The police were called at about 9 p.m.

According to the above two accounts, the two boys were on or in the water from about 5:30-9 p.m. while possibly also spending some time on a beach or sandbar. The exact time of Mark's disappearance is somewhere between those hours.

Mark's body was found, on April 16, at the end of Ludlow Lane in the Smith Creek area of Hampton Bays, far from where K.T. scrambled to shore six weeks earlier.

According to Susann, the Bay Constable, Ted Sadlier, told her that " 'most bodies surface where they go down.' I believe that my son went down in the Rampasture area, that the boat capsized there, and he never went back the other way toward East Quogue," said Susann.

As for as whether or not drugs or alcohol were involved in any way, a friend of Mark's, Adam Schabeot, said, "Mark and Jade had promised each other that neither of them would touch alcohol or drugs. I can tell you for certain that's true," said Adam. Susann has been trying to find out if there was a party going on in the Rampasture area at the time these incidents occurred. There was a party going on, attended by younger teenagers, to celebrate St. Patty's Day on Indian Run Road earlier, near the area where the boys first got in the boat and two houses down from where K.T. surfaced hours later.

Another mystery are the cries for help heard at the end of Ludlow Lane (where Mark's body eventually surfaced six weeks later) between 9-9:30 p.m. on the night of March 10. Jason Carson, a senior at Hampton Bays High School, called the police from his home in the Smith Creek area, near the end of Ludlow Lane, "after hearing cries for help coming from the direction of the water between 9-9:30 p.m.," he said last Friday. The police found nothing after investigating.

Lieutenant William Armstrong, on the second day of the search, was concerned about inconsistencies, according to Susann. "He called me and said that, after going over reports from the night before, he found so many inconsistencies that he was afraid that they had searched the wrong area," she said. "They searched the East Quogue area more thoroughly because that is where K.T. came out of the water. They did not search the Rampasture area as thoroughly and if the Bay Constable is correct, then that is where my son went down."

The case involving the death of Mark Legotti is "officially closed," according to Southampton

Who's Here:

Thich Nhat Hahn

Buddhist Monk

By Joan Zandell

The gymnasium at Southampton College can seat as many as 2000 people uncomfortably in its many bleachers, as well as free standing chairs placed on the basketball court. It is eight o'clock on a Saturday night in the Hamptons, the date is May 19, and the gymnasium is warm with the smell of bodies; it is stuffy and packed. A stage has been erected at the rear of the room near the door, where cushions are placed for the nuns and monks who have accompanied Thich Nhat Hanh on this speaking engagement. He is scheduled to address the graduates of the college the following morning at the Commencement Ceremony, but this evening; he is here to talk about living "mindfully" in the present moment.

As people seat themselves, a nun leads the rest of us in meditation. We are asked to slowly breathe in and out, while expressing gratitude for our bodies, for our arms and legs, our torsos, hearts, stomachs, intestines, lungs, our very breath. We apologize to all these parts of ourselves for the terrible way in which we treat them, in the ways in which we take them for granted, the ways in which we forget to care for and protect them. We acknowledge them as treasures. We are reminded that the very act of being alive is a treasure. When the meditation is complete, the room seems calmed and still.

Enter the President of Southampton College Robert F.X. Sillerman with revered Zen teacher, naturalist, journalist, novelist and long time East End resident Peter Matthiessen, followed by Thich Nhat Hanh, his monks and nuns. Peter Matthiessen is introduced and steps up to the podium. He shares with us that moments earlier Thich Nhat Hanh said to him that "to be a monk is to be a poet," implying that the two cannot be separated. Mr. Matthiessen reads a poem from a collection entitled The Heart of Understanding, and when he is done, respectfully introduces the port who has brought two thousand people to a gymnasium on the East End on this Saturday night.

Thich Nhat Hanh is a small, delicate, soft-spoken, and extremely focused man. His physical movements are economical, no energy is wasted, and when he speaks his tone is soft and calming. He tells us that love is a kind of energy that can protect, heal and transform. And that an essential component of love is understanding. But he stresses that it is not the kind of understanding that can be garnered by gathering information. It is the sort of understanding that can only be reached by looking deeply into the heart of reality, and the only way to pierce the heart of reality is to be there, fully alive, in the present moment.

Next, he wants to talk about the condition of impermanence. Nothing can be the same forever. He acknowledges that even if we know that, we behave as if things are permanent and this attitude makes us suffer. And so, we need to accept impermanence and use it as a key to unlock reality. Impermanence is a positive, he believes, and is therefore transforming. When you have an unpleasant feeling, keeping in mind the impermanence of things, you know that it will pass. That insight of impermanence creates us the opportunity to be truly alive in the here and now. We are asked to think of the person we love most in the world. Next we are asked to think of that person three hundred years from now. At first, the audience laughs, but then we see the point. Time is short, better not spend it foolishly.

> "When I finish the last drop of tea in this glass, the glass is not empty. the glass is full of air. Do not confuse emptiness with desolation."

Thich Nhat Hanh's gentleness does not waver, even when he says that most of us live in the future. "Stop running," he says, "free yourself, every minute of life is so precious. Why must we exchange it for power, wealth and fame? We have an idea that if we have more power and wealth that we will be happy. When you have freedom, you have the freedom to live and love. Time is far more precious than money."

He defines freedom as mindfulness, and mindfulness as the kind of energy that can make us aware. For example, when we invest the time in drinking a cup of tea, devoid of other distractions, only paying attention to the drinking of the tea, that is mindfulness. You are in the moment, you are not thinking about the past or the future. You are, in effect, free from the past as well as the future. In that way, it is a loving act. You go home to the self in the present moment. Happiness is possible now.

He then addresses the issue of anger towards a parent asking,

"Who in this room has not experienced anger and resentment towards a parent?"

A knowing hum fills the space. "When we feel anger towards a parent and want to distance ourselves from that parent," he continues, "we feel anger towards ourselves, because that parent and all our ancestors live on in every cell of our bodies...Our bodies are objects of transmission," he continues. "Our parents have transmitted nothing less than themselves to us. Generations are alive in every cell of our bodies, which in turn contain information about all the previous generations of our ancestors. We cannot escape who we are.

"Therefore when the father suffers, it is impossible for the son to be happy. The seeds of anger have been transmitted to him, and planted by his father. Yet, it is up to all of us to decide how we want to work with these seeds."

He believes that there are several types of negative seeds that we inherit. The seeds of anger, despair, jealousy, discrimination, and violence. "As part of mindful living, we must be careful not to allow people to water these seeds everyday."

We are made aware that conversations with others can be extremely toxic. At times, the content can feed the negative seeds and inadvertently make your loved ones suffer. To help us accept and work with the aspects of ourselves that we do not like are the positive seeds, which have also been transmitted to us. We must take care that they not be buried beneath the bad seeds.

"To protect one another from the watering of negative seeds is to love one another. That is an act of love. By not watering the seeds of despair, jealousy, anger and violence, you love yourself and you show love to your beloved."

Thich Nhat Hanh smiles, and lifts a small glass of tea to his lips. We watch him, completely immersed in the moment as this man lifts a glass to his lips before continuing. He takes a breath, and we breathe with him.

"When conditions come together, a flower can grow. A flower cannot exist alone. It needs sunshine, earth, water, and clouds. There is no separate self. That does not mean that you are not there. You are not empty. When I finish the last drop of tea in this glass, the glass is not empty. The glass is full of air. Do not confuse emptiness with desolation."

Some of us have learned to be mindful of the body by taking care of what we eat and by not consuming poisons to the body. Now we must learn to do the same with our consciousness. We must learn mindful consumption, because at present we are allowing ourselves and our children to be destroyed by what we consume."

Whether it is the junk food that we consume, or the movies and television that we choose to watch, the toxic magazine articles we choose to read, or as basic as the tainted water we drink and the impure that air we breathe, we pollute our minds in the same way that we pollute our bodies. At this point, many people in the audience begin to stir uncomfortably in their seats. "It is a part of the culture," he says. "We need to wake up to the reality of our culture today."

He then asks rhetorically, "What is the greatest gift that we as parents can give our children?" In his opinion, it is the gift of happiness and true love. And what are the components of true love? Understanding, compassion, joy and equanimity or non-discrimination. In order to explain equanimity or non-discrimination he cites an example making most of us chuckle. He lifts his right hand and looks at it saying, "My right hand writes my poems. My right hand does not say to my left hand, 'Look what I do for you! Who do you think you are?' attempting to make the left hand feel bad for not being the hand that writes the poems or even harming the left hand for not being the same as the right."

In his book The Path of Emancipation, Thich Nhat Hanh says, "You know that it is not good to abuse people, let them down, exclude them, and hurt the already wounded child in them, yet you still do it. If your children do not have a good Sangha (community) and meet a good teacher, they may not be able to transform this seed in themselves, and they will transmit it to their children. This is the vicious cycle we call samsara. To practice means to cut through this cycle and end it."

He talks about the importance of community, of family, of slowing down and taking the time to show love and understanding to one another and as we listen, we smile knowingly to ourselves. He glances at the small clock placed discreetly behind his knee and concludes that for a first talk, two hours will do. He repeats the definition of true love as the act of protecting and caring for your beloved, the purpose of which is to make our loved ones and ourselves suffer less. One of his nuns offers a closing song for the occasion and when the song is complete, Thich Nhat Hanh and his monks rise, bow in unison, then turn and slowly exit, leaving us to digest the challenging food for thought we are being asked to consume.

Thich Nhat Hanh is a venerated Buddhist monk, poet, scholar and peace activist who played a vital role in the negotiations that led to the end of the Vietnam War. A monk since the age of sixteen, by the age of 24 he co-founded the An Quang Pagoda which became South Vietnam's foremost center of Buddhist studies. A leader of the "Engaged Buddhism" movement, which melds meditative practices with non-violent civil disobedience, he came to the United States at 35 to teach comparative religion at Princeton and Columbia Universities, and returned to Vietnam to become the leader and founder of the School of Youth for Social Service. Nominated by Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. for the Nobel Peace Prize in 1967, he was also a member of the Buddhist Peace Delegation during the Paris Peace talks in 1973, resulting in his exile by the new Vietnamese government. He has lived in exile in France since that time where he established Plum Village in 1982, which is a spiritual retreat center where he now lives, situated near Bordeaux. He has written more than seventy-five books of prose, prayers and poetry. ●

Thich Nhat Hahn was unable to deliver the commencement address. Some time later in the evening after this talk, he was taken to Presyterian hospital in New York City for emergency eye surgery.

Martha Stewart

Lifestyle Expert

By Dan Rattiner

In recent years, I've interviewed almost all the so-called "celebrities" that now make this place home. I thought to run some of them this summer. As they are largely mini-biographies, they are timeless. I hope you enjoy them. The date of the interview appears at the beginning of the biography. An update appears at the end. The changes in people's lives, as demonstrated by this interview with Martha Stewart, are sometimes remarkable. –DR

JULY 1993

The thing you first notice about Martha Stewart is just how incredibly beautiful she is. She is not twenty years old anymore, but there is something about the way she carries herself and the way she moves, her wonderful face and smile that can bring conversation to a halt when she comes into a room.

People who are this handsome — men or women — can be intimidating to those around them, but Martha Stewart will have none of it. She gets right to the point. She is quick and fast and whatever feelings you might have about her remarkable appearance are swept away in unending waves of ideas, jokes, actions, activity and that most wonderful smile. She is nonstop. A mover. And she is having a great time with it although lately it is getting a little out of hand.

"It's the technology," she says. "Ten years ago I had one telephone. Now I have 24 lines, I have cellular phones, I have personally got five computers. The more technology, it seems, the more there is to do."

I am visiting with Martha Stewart in the home she bought last year on Lily Pond Lane in East Hampton. It is, she says, the first summer house ever built on the lane, constructed in 1873 by a Talmadge for an Eldridge — who was a Brooklyn minister. In any case, she has restored it and she has built around this wonderful early Victorian house some of the most beautiful gardens you can imagine. During our interview. Someone brought in a vase full of roses from these gardens. The flowers were the size of grapefruits. It was quite amazing.

Martha Stewart is today one of America's taste makers. She has her own magazine, Martha Stewart Living, published by Time-Warner, she has a segment on the Today show and over the last ten years she has published ten beautiful hard cover books. Her Martha Stewart Weddings book is the bible for all wedding planning and has sold close to a million. Her first book, Entertaining, shares the same reputation. And so does her book on gardening. Martha Stewart is one of a kind.

I really wanted to know, on first meeting Martha Stewart, where her remarkable taste – which has struck such a chord – has come from. But first, I asked her to define it.

"My books are written for everybody," she said. "Rich or poor, there is something for every lifestyle. And this carries over to everything that I do. For example, on a recent Today segment, we went to the studio of Mr. Clatt, who has done tin roofs for me. I was curious what he did when it rained. He said he makes hoods for ovens and so forth. I asked him to make me a desktop out of tin and he did so and it is beautiful. In this segment we showed how he does his soldering, forms edges and so forth. These are ideas for anybody. People like them."

> "He would strip naked and dress himself in a blanket and headress. He would paint his face with iridescent paint."

"How would you define good home entertaining?" I asked.

"It is one friend treating friends, it is beauty, caring, simplicity, fun, abundance, good things."

I wrote these things down as notes as she said them and I was startled at how concise each category was. She had just rattled them off.

But where had her interest in taste come from?

Martha Stewart was born and raised in New Jersey, a kid in the suburbs, from a large family with not much money and, as she began to spell it out, with extraordinary parents, particularly her father.

"We lived, from the time I was born until I graduated high school, in a three bedroom house in Nutley, New Jersey," she said. "I was the second oldest of six children. And both my parents were teachers. Well, teachers didn't make much money in those days and so when so many kids came along my father quit teaching and became a pharmaceutical salesman for Pfizer. Somehow, we got by. Everybody had chores to do. Lights were out at nine thirty. Home was run like a drill team with so many kids."

Both parents were European in their mannerisms. Her mother, who Martha describes as a great beauty, was the daughter of Polish immigrants. Her father — and she showed me pictures of him as a young man and he is so stunning with such piercing eyes it is hard to look at him – her father was the son of a Prussian cavalryman in the service of Prince Franz-Josef.

"You'll find this hard to believe," Martha told me, "but when we moved to Nutley, my father joined a European Cavalry Unit in Montclair. They still had cavalry then. (This was in the 1940s.) Father was also a horseback rider, a gymnast, and an expert with Indian clubs. He stayed in perfect physical condition until the day he died."

All the kids had chores. They did laundry. They set the table. One of Martha's chores was to polish her father's high boots.

Father dressed faultlessly. He wore Harris Tweeds. He had herringbone ties and leather shoes. They all had leather shoes. And father dressed his wife beautifully. When Martha was ten she played in her mother's dresses. At ten she was learning about peau de soie and shantung (Chinese silks). What other ten year old in New Jersey knew about these things?

The two ideas that dominated this household, and it was run in a very demanding fashion, were style and learning. There were, for example, always fresh vegetables in a silver bowl on the dining room table.

"Many of my brothers and sisters, particularly Laura and George, found being raised in such a demanding household very difficult. But I loved it. My father was a perfectionist. I was a perfectionist."

If there were schedules to be kept and chores to be done, then there was one thing you could do that could exempt you from them. You could read. If lights out was at nine p.m. and you wanted to read until midnight, so be it. You were learning. Martha and all her brothers and sisters took weekly trips to the local library. Martha would read five to ten books a week.

Two stories that Martha told me seem further to explain her ultimate fascination with style. One involved her father, who was also the scoutmaster for the Nutley troop.

"He did this every year, on Moving Up Day, the day the Cub Scouts became Boy Scouts. He would strip naked and dress himself in a blanket and headdress. He would paint his face with iridescent paint. And then, at the ceremony, the lights would dim, the curtains would open and there would be father, Big Indian, sitting on the school stage, a somber expression on his face and his iridescent body paint glowing in a blue light, and he would read poetry."

The second story involves Martha's work as chairperson of the Prom Club in her senior year at Nutley High School. She was a mover and a shaker even then and she was editor of the school magazine the Gauntlet, she was on Student Council, she was in the Latin Club and for the prom, well, here is what she did.

"I called it Stairway to the Stars," she said. "The gym had a high ceiling so I had netting put up under it, then I had blue angel hair put over that. I hung from it clear plastic stars. I also had a grand flight of stairs constructed. Couples could climb the stairs, they went up toward the ceiling, and then at the top step there was a landing where you could have your picture taken. Stairway to the Stars."

It seemed to Martha that, among all the children, she was the most curious about everything. Her father seemed to think so. He took her to New York City to museums, to Chinatown. They would wander around Chinatown. At twelve, a schoolmate of hers across the street started to do modeling in Manhattan. Martha wanted to do it too and so her parents took her in to the agency in the city and they took her on. For the next fifteen years, until the birth of her daughter Alexis, she modeled professionally around the city, at first going in with her parents or a chaperone and later, as a high school student, going into the city by herself.

"I became a fashion model," she said. "On weekends, anyway. They paid me $25 an hour which was a fortune back then, certainly more than the 50 cents an hour I made baby sitting."

"How did you get into the city by yourself?" I asked.

"Easy. There was a bus stop right on the corner of our block. It was the number 13 bus and it took me from Kingsland Road through the Lincoln Tunnel to the Port Authority in less than thirty minutes. From there, I could go anywhere."

She never was a front cover model, but she was often a back cover model, for Clairol and other clients. She did a lot of editorial model work for Glamour magazine and Mademoiselle. They took her on the weekends to Florida and to Canada and, once, to Paris, for the debut of the collections.

"Once the shoot was on Shelter Island, at the house of Perry Como, I think."

Martha Kostyra, her maiden name, went off to Barnard to be a chemist. She wasn't good at it. however. And so she changed her major to art history and English. She did her thesis — they had thesis for bachelor's degrees at Barnard then — on Finance Minister Colbert's design for the roof of the Louvre constructed during the reign of Louis XIV.

At age 19, while still at Barnard, she married a Yale law student, Andrew Stewart. Her marriage to him lasted 27 years. She and Andrew were divorced in 1990.

"I moved to New Haven," she said. "I finished up my last year at Barnard while living there. It was an amazing and horrible commute. In retrospect I do not know how I did it. My husband said we should live in Guilford, on a farm 20 minutes from New Haven. What did I know? I was 19. He'd get up at four a.m., drive me to the train station, I'd travel two hours on these horrible wicker seats they had then, you couldn't even sleep on them, get off at 125th Street, then take the subway to Barnard. It was a four hour commute all together. My husband would pick me up at ten p.m." She pauses. "We should have lived in Greenwich."

After college, Andrew Stewart joined a Wall Street law firm and he, too, commuted. Martha took a job at Pearlberg-Monness, a go-go Wall Street research firm. They had charts on the wall measuring everybody's performance every day. She loved it. But she also found out something fundamental about herself.

"I found out I really liked substance, things. I was successful at Pearlberg-Monness, we were all successful, but try as I might I could not make substance out of securities. I began to think what else I could do."

The Sheltered Islander

By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 156 THE MUSIC MAN

Last week's Shelter Island Reporter ran a very nice article on the upcoming Island production of The Music Man. There was just one little glitch, no mention of who is playing The Music Man. The production is loaded with Island talent. Marcellus, played by a knock-out talent, Nick Denning, will be worth the price of admission all by himself. Jennifer Corwin, a veteran actress who recently turned down the lead in Moulin Rouge, will be fantastic as Mrs. Shinn. James "The Postman Delivers" Wilcenski is the constable with a fantastic voice. Darrin Binder schlepping a suitcase full of bricks as the anvil salesman will only steal the scenes he's in.

But who, praytell, is playing the highly demanding role of The Music Man? Who will be singing, dancing, acting, and whipping the crowd into a frenzy? Someone who is tall.... handsome... loud.... loaded with blarney... Look, up on the stage, is it a bird? Is it a plane? No! It's Super Dave!

Why, it's David O'Flynn, veteran of many North Fork Theatre productions, including leading man in Kind Lady, The Cemetery Club and now The Music Man.

David is a local carpenter...hey, this is how Harrison Ford started... and my little brother. He was such a pain as a bratty kid brother. He'd stay in the living room and play trucks really loud until my boyfriends gave him money to leave. He had a nice little extortion angle going for a long time. As a teen he worked on the potato farms on the north fork, back in the days when we grew potatos here on Long Island. Later he worked at DisneyWorld as a street actor. Now, he's come full circle – as so many of us do here – and is back where he started.

This show has everything the Broadway version does: They gotta stage, we gotta stage. They got people jumping up on chairs, we got people jumping up on chairs, okay, folding chairs, but chairs is chairs... We've got a band. We got costumes, a Wells Fargo wagon, a quartet, called "The Full Montys." Why is the quartet called "The Full Montys"? Guess you better come see the show... We got seats, tickets, a program, not

Patio Fountain ▶

How would you like this beautiful fountain in the middle of your indoor or outdoor patio? Designs reflect the tastes and life styles that range from tropical to neo-Classical, from Victorian to post-Modern. All works are created using a custom stoneware clay body, which is extremely strong after firing. Custom glazes provide permanent color. The final product can be likened to "glazed stone" which permanently maintains its color and structural integrity indoors or out. Architectural Clay Designs, Inc. designs custom three-dimensional works to transform whole environments into original works of art such as fireplaces, and more. Available at Architectural Clay Designs, Inc., Cocoa, Florida, 877-633-1066.

How cool does this sound? Buzz by traffic jams, ride around in the open and find a parking space easily. The Cruiser Scooter is a real novelty item. An exact replica of a 1940's Whizzer that looks like a cross between a nineteen O something Harley and Pee Wee Herman's Bicycle. This model was originally made from an old style Schwinn frame bike and a quiet 4 cycle engine. This is one of the coolest and most unusual looking machines on the road today. The Cruiser comes in six yummy colors. If you want to be noticed around town this summer, this is the one you want. Available at Karts & Parts, 36 Sunrise Hwy, Balwin, New York, 516-223-3039.

Obituary: Robert F. Blake

Robert F. Blake, director of publicity for the CBS Television Network during the golden age of television, died May 13th of lung cancer at his home in Bridgehampton, Long Island. He was 85.

Blake's long career in broadcasting encompassed executive public relations posts with CBS and CBS Cable, NBC and the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company. He served the past four years as senior consultant with Goodman Media International, a New York-based public relations firm, handling projects that included the Daytime Emmy Awards on CBS and NBC, Public Broadcasting Service's 30th Anniversary celebration and its "Millennium 2000" special, the largest live television event in history.

Born in New York, Blake's communications career began in the 1930s at the New Yorker magazine, where he was a reporter and sub-editor under the legendary editor William Shawn. He moved to WOR Radio in 1940 as a continuity editor and was drafted into the U.S. Army a year later. As a member of the Army Air Force's Ninth Air Force public relations department stationed in London, he frequently contributed to the military newspaper Stars and Stripes, where he worked with Walter Cronkite and Andy Rooney.

Blake joined the Columbia Broadcasting System in 1950, holding several posts for the company's radio and television divisions, including director of press information for the CBS Television Network in Los Angeles.

He was responsible for publicity efforts for a lineup of shows and stars that earned the CBS the sobriquet of The Tiffany Network. Among the shows under his purview: I Love Lucy; The Jack Benny Program; The George Burns & Gracie Allen Show; The Red Skelton Show; Gunsmoke; Perry Mason and Playhouse 90. He also worked on specials starring Marlene Dietrich and Judy Garland.

Blake was with the network when Jackie Gleason moved from the Dumont Network to CBS, dominating Saturday nights with his hour-long variety show that included "The Honeymooners."

Blake also fashioned close working relationships with the noted television and entertainment columnists of the era, including the World Telegram & Son's Harriet Van Horne and Jack Gould of the New York Times.

His tenure as director of press information for Westinghouse Broadcasting Group W Productions and Group W Films ran from 1961 through 1974. Blake supervised and implemented publicity for the launch of "the all news" radio concept for WINS, New York and KFWB, Los Angeles, and for the Merv Griffin Show and David Frost Show.

After serving as director of press information for CBS Cable from its launch in 1981 through 1983, Blake began a career as a consultant to WPIX-TV, Independent Network News and the Overseas Press Club.

Before joining Goodman Media International, Blake was Director of Media Relations for the National Academy of Television Arts and Science. He was instrumental in bringing the Daytime Emmy Award nominations to live television when they aired on Good Morning America and brought the Sports Emmy Award nominations to CNN in 1996.

There are no surviving family members. ●

Montauk's Bonnie Lee Sanders opened the show A Chest Full of Dolly: The Songs of Dolly Parton, singing Dolly's heartfelt song I Remember, last Thursday evening, May 17, at Downtime, New York City. It was an evening devoted to Parton-penned country songs. Beside Bonnie, some other exciting guest singers included Amy Allison, Brenda Bergman and Bob Mould. Dolly's producer, Steve Buckingham flew in from Nashville for the special performance. The show was produced by the Chelsea Mountain Boys. Dolly, the fairy godmother of country music, was totally moved by the tribute to her and hopes to attend a repeat performance. Of course the club was packed with loyal Dolly fans.

review: i ought to be in pictures

By Janet Berg

If you are a daughter, a son, a mother, or a father, who is, of course, all of us; then you can relate to the humorously touching messages given in the play, I Ought To Be In Pictures.

Although, this 1980 Neil Simon play is not one of his best-known productions, it is once again a satisfying comedy, warmly produced by the Hampton Theatre Company, and proved to be very entertaining.

We are immediately brought into the trendy California-style bungalow of Herb Tucker, played by Robert Anthony, a washed-up, dried-out, disillusioned, middle-aged Hollywood writer, when his estranged, teenage daughter from Brooklyn, shows up at his front door with a backpack slung over her shoulder and hitchhiking boots on her feet.

Apropos to the character of Herb, himself, the setting represents a lived-in, casual look of comfy bamboo furniture, crooked pictures and window shades on the walls, sporadically strewn articles of clothing, and a floor littered with writer's block.

Herb hides behind fantasies of baseball memories, and comes off as gruff and clumsy as a big old Papa bear, yet we can detect a gentleness, and forgive his abruptness.

When his long lost daughter, Libby, whom he hasn't seen for 16 years, shows up at the door, the 19-year old receives a taken-back greeting from her father's lover, Steffy Blondell, the studio makeup artist, played by Garrett McConnell. In her courageous, yet innocent, New York accent, actress Samantha Van Ostrand, asks the newly befriended stranger, "What should I call him, Papa or Mr. Tucker?"

In just a heartbeat, the girl's forthright charm and sensitivity win Steffy over, and the woman shows her the same warmth and patience that she has given her non-committal father over the past two years. Perhaps, the young girl's quest to define her relationship with the father, triggers Steffy to do the same, as the sacrificial woman simultaneously needs more than what Herb is willing to give.

Okay, so we are ready to condemn the man who walked out on his wife, son, and three-year-old little girl, when Libby refers to herself as "sort of his daughter," and refers to him as a "sh heel."

Yet, when we get to realize the grown man's uneasiness, as fearful as love, as a wild animal fears a steel trap, we empathize with him, and focus in on his tender side. Libby seems grateful to learn that she inherited two gifts from this man, her sense of humor and her ability to be a dreamer.

The small cast does justice to the subtle one-liners, which infuse humanity with sudden emotions, and make the audience wonder, 'should I laugh to get out this lump that's stuck in my throat?'

The headstrong daughter, irresistible to us by now, uses the excuse that she's come out west to be a movie star, and is tough enough to handle it on her own, while testing her father's love (or guilt?) in just what he is willing to do for her.

The father cross-examines, if she came 3000 miles to "let out her hostility," but Libby admits she has only come to "get rid of it." In the next scenes, we see Libby's transformation of the bungalow, straightened out and redecorated, with touches of fresh flowers, turning the house into a happier home. And we see Herb earning the right to be a "real" father, while sitting up sleeping in a chair at 3 o'clock in the morning, worried where his daughter might be.

Like a fly on the wall, we share close conversations in the intimate surroundings of the small stage, as the performances are rich and far-reaching into the audience seats. We may laugh a little, cry a little, in between the delivery, remembering our own relationships.

Between the quality acting and the melding of brilliant direction of Diana Marbury, and Assistant Director Erika Mehiel, along with the talents of Peter Marbury, set designer, Sebastian Marbury, stage manager, Frank Russell, technical director, lighting, Eric Schlobohm, and a team of highly praised crew of production staff, I Ought To Be In Pictures was well-received and applauded.

The Hampton Theatre Company, in association with the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center presented Neil Simon's, "I Ought To Be In Pictures" through Sunday, May 20th. CALL 288-1500 FOR INFORMATION ON FUTURE SHOWS. ● year-around guy with three dogs.

Mistaken

So it's late August and I'm walking the dogs not long after dark. It could not have been any later than nine. Just as I was parallel to a driveway a car stops parallel to me. I hear voices from the car. I assume the occupants are waiting for me to pass so they can pull in. But all of a sudden a man jumps out from one side and another man jumps out from another and they come running at me and one of them grabs me by the arm and my big dog Garnet growls and makes as if to lunge at my accoster and the man draws back and yells something like "Get him away from me!" or "Stop him!"

I'm not quite sure of the order of what followed, but, coming quickly upon one another, I see the men are wearing Hawaiian shirts and I see one of them flashing a badge saying FBI and I am calming Garnet down, not wanting him to take out a federal agent.

"Well, what do you want," I said, "You grabbed me."

"I called for you to stop."

"I couldn't hear what you said."

In a calmer atmosphere, the FBI agents, in their very colorful shirts, questioned me as so many police officers had done. And I told these G-men my name was already on file and I am just walking my dogs and did they think I was going to scale outside walls and prowl through bedrooms while my dogs roamed the roads.

The agents did not make any jokes about the dogs being lookouts. They simply took my name and address again and the four of us, me and the dogs, were on our way.

Well, the summer ended and the police did not catch the cat burglar. But that winter they did, in Palm Beach, Florida. Apparently, the oft-successful thief had simply followed the rich to their winter haunts. In fact, before his capture, one victim, robbed of her jewelry, found a note in her bedroom that read, "Sorry I missed you in Southampton."

I wonder, today, if during any of the cat burglar's heists, he looked out a window and saw a young man walking three dogs down the street. ●

She decided upon catering. In 1972, when Alexis was six years old, she opened The UnCatered Affair, out of her home in Westport. She would cater weddings and receptions and bar mitzvahs. And she would do it, by and large, with things that she had produced in her garden. Her home — Andrew Stewart was already quite successful — had six acres of grounds. She grew flowers and vegetables and plants. There were even chickens. She loved being in her garden.

"My idea for the catering firm was that it would cater as if you had done it yourself — the uncatered affair. It quickly became very successful. I did parties at the Met, at the Cooper, I did practically all the previews at Sotheby's. I kept this firm going until 1986 by which time I was doing parties for as many as 2,000 with a staff of 200. It was a million dollar business."

Martha probably would have continued with her catering business if it had not been for one thing — her successes — particularly the successes with the magnificent coffee table books that she wrote and which Clarkson N. Potter Publishing published — had come to the attention of a large department store chain.

"My husband had gone into the publishing business — first as publisher of Abrams Art Books and then with his own firm Stewart-Tabori and Chang — and though he did not publish my work there is no doubt I learned much about publishing from him. So my first book, Entertaining, came out in 1982 and was a smash hit and then I did one a year, Quick Cook, Pies And Tarts, Hors D'oeuvres, and in 1986 along came K-Mart."

K-Mart wanted nothing less than to mass produce merchandise picked out by Martha under the Martha Stewart name. Martha saw this as an extraordinary opportunity to have her ideas become known to the mass culture.

"This company talked about billions," she said. "Billions and hundreds of millions as in a hundred million shoppers through their doors every year. I signed on with them. And I designed for them flatware and bedroom and bathroom things and sheets and ensembles and I am still doing this today. Just to give you an idea, when I designed lace for the first sheets I did, K-Mart calculated they would need an amount of lace for the trim that, if you extended it from end to end, would go from New York to Chicago. This blew me away."

K-Mart asked her to close her catering business to devote full time to her books and designing. She did. Her one-a-year books continued and then, in 1989, she thought it would be a good idea to publish a magazine as well.

"I approached Conde Nast that year," she said. "People thought I was crazy to start a magazine in a bad economic time. But I was convinced that my magazine would fill a need. There was simply no up-to-date how-to magazine on style and elegance in America. Time Warner picked up on the idea. Our first issue we printed a quarter of a million. Now, three years later, it continues bimonthly and we have just raised our advertising base to three quarters of a million."

It occurred to me to ask if Martha Stewart works in an office.

"I work in my garden," she says. "I have an office, but I don't like spending time in it. I do my best work in the garden. I live in my car. I'm in touch by cell phone."

Originally, Martha's husband helped her with her garden in Westport. But the time involved soon forced him to tell her he could no longer continue. Martha employs Renato and Rinaldo, two Brazilians who have been with her many years. They live in her barn in Westport.

"Gardens are exactly the opposite of me," she said. "They take time. You have to be very patient in a garden and you can't rush it. I experiment, I try things. This garden here in East Hampton I like a lot because it is only one acre and we can keep it up in just one day a week."

"How about your Westport garden?" I asked.

"It is an out of control garden. Chickens, fruit, berries, vegetables, a great variety in extreme numbers. I love it. And now I have my eyes on a 35 acre piece of land in Fairfield. It is perfect for my next garden. It has a stream, a pond, views, huge trees, everything my Connecticut garden does not have."

How Martha Stewart, your basic Westport resident — four of her six brothers and sisters live in Connecticut — came to East Hampton is another story.

"I was going through a divorce. My daughter Alexis, who had gone to Barnard and had been coming out here summers with her friends said mom, take a place in the Hamptons. When you what Leighton says was "a pretty penny."

At the present time, according to Leighton, the gates are in a foundry upstate in Peekskill, New York, undergoing renovation and refurbishment.

"There is a tremendous amount of rust that is being removed," he said. "And then, of course, they have to be painted with a preservative."

Nevertheless, Leighton says he is confident that the gates will be in his studio by May 26, coming through the huge two story barn doors in the back, to be available there for the opening on June 1.

"I'm thinking somebody with a very big house who wants his privacy will want to buy these doors," Leighton said. "Maybe Ira Rennert. Maybe somebody else with a big house. I am scheduling the auction for July 3."

One person who will not be attending the opening is the great Phillipine sculptor Marcos Blatt. He was killed by a sniper's bullet fired from the Westhampton overpass while driving down the Sunrise to the opening day ceremonies for the gate back on May 25, 1971.

He was 83 years old at the time. The perpetrator was never found. ●

Town Police Detective Sargeant Robert Flood. "According to the medical examiner, the cause of death was drowning and the manner was accidental. Our investigation has led us to concur with their conclusion. After extensive questioning of two witnesses, Kenneth 'K.T.' Tofty, Tomas DiBenedetto and others, we agree with the medical examiner's findings. According to K.T., the boys rowed across Tiana Bay from the Pinefield area of East Quogue and made it safely to a sand spit at the west side of Rampasture Point. They were spotted by two witnesses who reported later that the boys did not appear to be in distress. After spending some time (unspecified) there, they pulled the boat over the sand spit and put it back in the water on the south side of the point and attempted to row east in the direction of Smith Creek. The water was rougher here and, after the boat foundered somewhere between Rampasture and East Quogue, the boys attemped to swim toward lights that they saw on the shore."

"It just doesn't make sense that my son went down in East Quogue and then drifted all the way around past the Rampasture Point into Smith Creek." Susann said. "And if the boys were in the Rampasture area on land, I don't believe that Mark would have gotten back in the boat a second time. He was a ten minute walk from the bakery where he was supposed to meet his girlfriend, Jade, at 7 p.m. I would just love for them to re-open this case." ● get a divorce it is a very good place to be. So she rented a house for me on Mill Hill Lane two years ago and I came out and rode my bike around town and thought it was charming and I socialized and I liked it. And so Alexis persuaded me to buy a house."

Alexis, it turns out, is as much a perfectionist as her mother. She is 28 now and has opened a "Fifties" motel in Bridgehampton and will soon open a "Fifties" diner in Bridgehampton but three years ago she told her mother that she, Alexis, could allocate exactly one day to finding a house with her mother.

"I called Frank Newbold, the realtor, and I told him that. I told him, line up ten houses and I'll come out and we'll see them one after another and so that is what he did. The first nine houses were all wrong, for the eighth and ninth we didn't even get out of the car, and then he said he hesitated to show us the tenth because it's for sale but then it is not for sale and it is on again off again and I said let's see it and it was love at first sight."

Martha Stewart opened her Lily Pond Lane house for a fundraiser for the first time last month, a fundraiser for the East Hampton Historical Society, and it was a smash hit. There will be more.

"I like this house because it is spare and uncluttered and light. It really is very beautiful. A beautiful rose covered cottage."

Martha talked proudly for a while about her remarkable daughter Alexis. Alexis, she said, has an extraordinary entrepreneurial spirit. And she is learning a great deal about personal relationships, having to steer her restaurant project past the scrutiny of the Southampton Town Board.

"She has indeed thrust herself into extremely difficult positions. But that is Alexis. You know, I do pre-Martha which is Victorian. Alexis does pre-Alexis, which is Fifties. Same idea."

Our interview was coming to an end. A film crew was arriving to photograph her roses which were now in such full bloom. She'd had messages that

WE'RE SHAKING THE TREE

THE LADIES' VILLAGE IMPROVEMENT SOCIETY

Historic, activist and on the move. That's today's LVIS.

You may remember when the ladies of the LVIS axed down the billboards! But if that's old history, you may know us for our constant efforts to help maintain and preserve the trees, care for the village greens and nature trail, and establish East Hampton's historic districts. We put up the flags for all our national holidays. To beautify and enhance – always. These are just a few of our ongoing priorities.

Now, in 2001 we're also turning our attention to East Hampton's future. To help keep our farmland as farmland, to help with the Town's Comprehensive Plan and the Village Plan. We're helping improve our schools, providing scholarships for our students. They – and East Hampton – are our future.

That's what shaking the tree means – we're on the move, reaching out however and wherever we can to help improve today's East Hampton.

Today's LVIS. We're shaking the tree.

Alexis had called several times, wanting to talk to her mother. Otherwise, Martha's staff (based in Westport) had done a pretty good job screening all calls for the two hours Martha and I had spent together.

And so you think that is all about this amazing woman, Martha Stewart? Think again. Her next project is a half hour television show which she is doing for syndication. It's been sold in 80% of the country including Chicago and Los Angeles and here in New York on Channel 2.

If the past is any indication of the future, the Martha Stewart Living show should be on the air perhaps the day after tomorrow.

UPDATE 2001

Alexis Stewart's Bridgehampton Motel, done in high "fifties" style, opened in the late spring of 1993. Her planned 50s-style diner at the west end of Bridgehampton failed to materialize but for many years Alexis ran both the motel and a health club she owned and developed in East Hampton.

As for Martha Stewart her empire has expanded exponentially, and she has become a household word. Her magazine, Martha Stewart Living has a circulation that nears a million and a half, her TV show has a national audience of 5.5 million, and, of course, she has a syndicated column.

Martha is indeed everywhere. Her magazine has birthed two other publications, Martha Stewart Baby and Martha Stewart Weddings; MarthaStewart.com, tells you haw to press pansies into postcards and the correct way to display the flag; she has a huge line of paints, sheets and towels at K-Mart and she has her own catalogue of what you should absolutely have, items which you can also order through her website.

She has become such an accomplished and much watched television presence that she had been compared not only to the finest Hollywood stars but, amusingly, Captain Kangeroo and Mister Rogers. Her perennial cathphrase, "It's a good thing," became the benediction of the 1990s and seems destined to be as much a part of American colloquialism as anything by Yogi Berra.

Ms. Stewart has made her quest to show us all the correct "style" for good living, the simplicity of doing it yourself, and shortcuts to make it easier. She has ventured from the living room and kitchen and garden to such surprising venues as...Kilimanjaro, which she tackled carrying the correct creature comforts such as brush-on-blush and thirty-six liters of bottled water. •

preview: guild hall 2001

By Heather Newcomb

You know the type. Cultured and contemporary, with impeccable taste. Ageless and modern and capable of dynamic re-creation. Fashionably forward-thinking, with an uncanny sense of public taste and an enthusiasm for discovery and learning.

Guild Hall of East Hampton is this type. Since its founding in 1931, Guild Hall has offered the best in both traditional and emerging visual, performing and literary art forms. Now in its 70th year, the venerable arts institution blooms afresh amid its rich cultural history and is scheduled to present more than 50 exciting events this summer.

The 2001 summer programs and activities reflect Guild Hall's commitment to providing the community with a wide variety of arts and entertainment options, which are affordable and attractive to people of all ages. Guild Hall's staff conducted extensive marketing research to identify the preferences and desires of their members and the community, and, consequently, developed new and more activities specific to audience needs.

In tandem with the kick-off of its summer programs, Guild Hall also launches a fresh look – a new logo that graphically communicates the institution's name and essence. Designed by Pentagon Graphics, the logo features the initials "G" and "H" reversed out in an orange block design, above the name "Guild Hall" in black type. The versatile, contemporary design has impact in its simplicity and will serve as a visual cornerstone for Guild Hall's brand.

The new look is a "symbol of the renaissance" of Guild Hall, says Ruth Appelhof, Executive Director, who promises a "blockbuster" season of events. This renaissance celebrates Guild Hall's innovative vision through the dynamic interplay of visual arts, theater, music, dance, film and literature.

Below are highlights of the summer season at Guild Hall.

FINE ART

Dennis Oppenheim: New Works – A 20th century pioneer in new media, earthworks and other non-traditional art forms, Springs resident Dennis Oppenheim will appear at the exhibit's opening reception on June 9 for this show of all new works. Mr. Oppenheim also will present a lecture with slides on June 11. The exhibit runs from June 9 through July 27.

55th Annual Clothesline Art Sale – A free event where local artists literally "hang out" their work for show and sale. Benefits both Guild Hall and the artists. August 4.

The Reality Effect: Contemporary American Photography – A collection of print and video works by some of the country's top photographers (who all have East End connections), including Peter Campus, Nan Goldin, Warren Neidich and Cindy Sherman. August 10 through October 7, with a public reception on August 10.

THEATER

Married Moments – A new play by B.H. Friedman with the Abingdon Theatre Company. Seven snapshots of a married life, with a touching answer to the question "Should I marry her?" Nine performances, selected dates from June 14 through 24.

Manhattan Casanova – Tony and Academy Award-winning Mercedes Ruehl stars in Jenny Lyn Bader's new play about compulsive behavior, love in the Internet age and meeting one's match. Twelve performances, selected dates from August 23 through September 9.

MUSIC AND DANCE

American Rhapsody – A fizzy, cabaret-style Gershwin musical revue with KT Sullivan and Mark Nadler, fresh from its successful Off-Broadway run.

Ten concerts, from June 27 through July 8.

JDT Unplugged – Musician Jim Turner jams with a collection of East End favorites: the Lone Sharks, Caroline Doctorow and Phoebe Legere on July 12; and Nancy Atlas, Bruce & Gabriel and Stephanie Cardinali on August 9.

Batoto Yetu – Swahili for "Our Children," this exuberant dance troupe will perform under the artistic direction of Julio Leitao. July 14.

Robert Klein – A Hamptons favorite, who performs as part of the Delsener Slater/SFX "Concerts by the Sea" series. July 20.

LITERATURE AND LECTURES

Writers at Guild Hall – Jimmy Breslin talks about his book, I Don't Want to Go to Jail. July 8.

Spalding Gray Interviewing the Audience – A chance for dialogue with the insightful master of contemporary conversation. August 17.

How LIPA Wants You To Save On Air Conditioning

Remember the '60s sci-fi show, The Outer Limits? "Do not attempt to adjust your television set. We will adjust the horizontal, we will control the vertical." Well, the Long Island Power Authority is asking a few thousand LIPA customers to allow the company to do just that with their air conditioners this summer – in order to save them and the rest of us some power.

The program, called LIPA Edge, would work like this: the willing homeowners will have their air conditioners controlled by a thermostat that will be under the control of a computerized LIPA network which will regulate the temperature throughout the day and night. This will permit LIPA to shut down the air conditioners altogether at appropriate times.

By doing this LIPA is trying to save about five megawatts of power in peak demand times; and next year LIPA is shooting for thirty megawatts. And the participating homeowners will also save on their electric bills, perhaps in the area of fifteen percent.

Average Home Price in Hamptons Climbs to $700,826 During First Quarter

The average sale price of a home in the Hamptons rose by 22.5 percent during the first three months of 2001, though sales transactions dropped 36.8 percent, indicating sales of more moderately priced homes had fallen while sales in the million plus range was still going strong.

To be more precise, sales of houses under $500,000 were down 45.2 percent in the first quarter while million dollar plus transactions rose 10.9 percent, making up 14 percent of all sales.

The highest average sales prices were recorded in East Hampton Village: $2.3 million, up 27.6 percent from a year ago; Bridgehampton, $1.5 million, up 56.3 percent; Southampton Village, $1.065 million, up 30.8 percent.

The largest number of $2 million and up sales, fourteen, took place in Bridgehampton, an increase of 75 percent.

The East Hampton area and Westhampton were the busiest sales markets. A total of 122 homes sold in East Hampton and 108 in Westhampton.

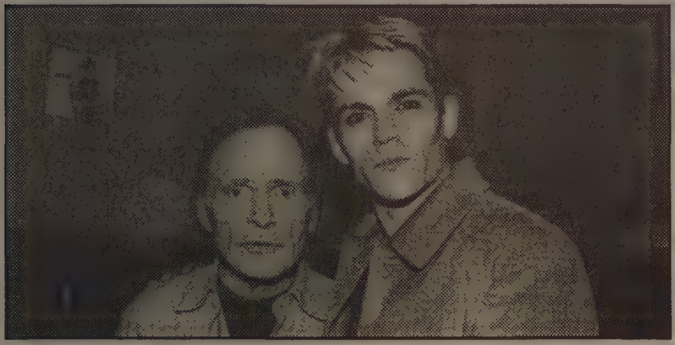
"LET'S DO THE TIME WARP AGAIN"

Richard O'Brien, writer and creator of the legendary rock musical, The Rocky Horror Show, was in town last night to celebrate RCA's release of the newest album. Tony nominee Tom Hewitt, dressed in full regalia, joined O'Brien and the rest of the Tony nominated cast at the Virgin Mega-Store in Times Square to perform and sign autographs for 250 lucky fans who woke up in the early hours to get a VIP pass for the signing. The album, which was released on May 15th, features new renditions of the hard-driving, raunchy rock ballads that have become classics in the 25 years since the musical first opened. "Broadway has finally gotten a rock musical right!!!"



1. Tom Hewitt (a Tony Award nominee) plays Frank-n-Furter
2. Kristen Lee Kelly (plays Columbia) and Dea Delaria (plays Eddie and Dr. Scott)
3. Richard O'Brien and Alice Ripley (plays Janet Weiss)

SWORDFISH A LA TRAVOLTA

Warner Bros. had a screening last Friday at the Ziegfield that had all the makings of a Hollywood premiere. A large crowd embraced the theater looking for a glimpse at a real Hollywood star, John Travolta. Although it was a Friday night and competing with the seasonal Hamptons exodus, the screening for Swordfish a Joel Silver action flick, had lots of celebrity power. The movie which has not yet opened, had lots of Silver coated car crashes and explosions, some cyber thriller aspects for the plot ponderers, and some Berry well known star skin exposure for all. After the film I witnessed something that I found interesting. We know that many stars either brood over their fame or are shy. But John Travolta really seems to enjoy it. Here's what happened: John and his wife Kelly Preston were exiting the theater and approaching the escalator. A short middle-aged woman ran over to take his picture. He stopped and then took the woman's camera and gave it to one of her friends and then posed with this astonished woman hugging her like a close friend. The after-screening party was at the Skating Rink at Rockefeller Plaza where MTV was having a party in conjunction with the event and there were dancers who could move every muscle of their bodies in different directions simultaneously. No, Travolta did not get up and do his Fever number.

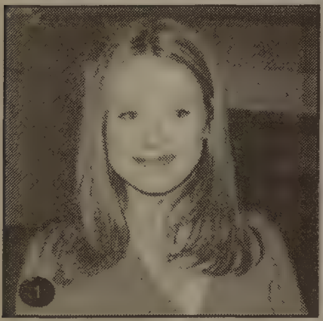
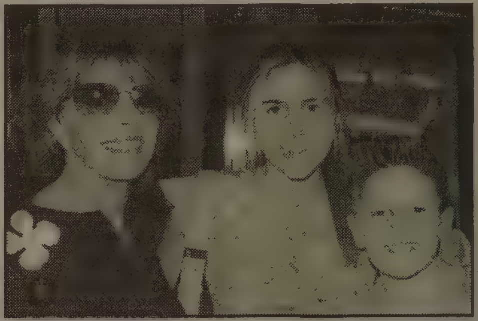
SHREK

For one evening, that being last Tuesday, the hottest ticket in town was not for The Producers (although if you have an extra pair I'll take it!) it was for the special screening of Shrek at the Beekman Theater. The house was filled with celebrities and their kids and no one seemed disappointed, including the critics, as I have noticed. This cartoon had the voices of some of the film industry's most versatile stars, Mike Myers, Eddie Murphy, John Lithgow and Cameron Diaz.





1. Kelly Ripa 2. Patti Wechster and sons Robert and David and Paula Zahn with daughter Haley and son Jared 3. Jelly Bean Benitez with daughters Layla and Raya and Carolyn Effez 4. Judy Licht, Jessie, and J.T. 5. Susan Sarandon, Shrek and friends 6. Magee Hickey 7. Chevy Chase and Shrek 8. Peter Gallagher, Paula Harwood with daughter Katherine and son Jamie.

SISTER MARY EXPLAINS IT ALL

Sister Mary will be airing on Showtime by the time this article runs and it is safe to say that there will be lots of discussion and plenty of explaining to do. This film is based on a Christopher Durang play which was a one-woman performance. It starts off kind of like Stand-up Comedy at St Patty's, with Sister Mary delivering her views on Heaven, Earth and Purgatory and the audience is laughing at things they remembered from Catholic school. Then halfway through it gets a little strange and I won't give away any details but I can say that the theatergoers were still sitting after the credits rolled. The after-screening party was at Osteria del Circo, where there were lots of Hamptonites, including a glowing Liz Byrne.

1. Al Franken, Matthew Blank, Christopher Durang 2. Don Hewitt 3. Gerry and Lyz Byrne 4. Dick Cavett 5. Robert Klein 6. Lee Grant 7. Wendy Wasserstein 8. Karen Allen 9. Jerry Della Femina and Judy Licht 10. Kim Garfunkel 11. Cecilia Peck, Daniel Voll

"FOLLIES," FANTASY IN THE LANDSCAPE

Text and Photos by Ginger Propper

This past week the Parrish Art Museum opened an amazing exhibition of the history of structures in the garden. This exhibit set up by guest curator, Barbara Toll and inspired by Charlotte Moss is not to be missed. The wealth of historical information for the avid gardener is mesmerizing. Don't miss June 16th for a fabulous auction to acquire your very own "Folly."

THE HEART OF THE HAMPTONS

The American Heart Association held its fifth annual Heart Gala & Wine Auction, "The Heart of the Hamptons," on Saturday, May 5th at the Westhampton Country Club. Over 275 guests attended the black-tie affair, which raised over $54,000 to help fight heart disease and stoke, Long Island's # 1 and # 3 killers.Dr. Thomas Biancaniello, Chief of Pediatric Cardiology at Stony Brook and Richard Micallef, Vice President of the Suffolk County National bank were honored at the event along with the event chairman, John Tortorella. There was a silent and live auction of wines from around the world which were secured by auction chairman, Allan Stimmel. Following the program and auction, guests danced the night away to the sounds of the Hackensack Men and Trenton Horns.

COCKTAILS WITH IRVING AND DIANE BENSON HOST ALBEE, STRITCH AND LARSEN

Kimberly Goff

In preparation for the first LongHouse fundraiser to be held at theLongHouse Reserve on July 21st, Irving and Diane Benson invited a group of LongHouse supporters to an afternoon cocktail party on Sunday, May 20th. Edward Albee will be honored at the event, Diane Benson will chair the event, Elaine Stritch will be a part of the Longhouse event and all joined us to celebrate the idea at the Benson's on Sunday. Since it was meant to be a tulip party, it was great to see the tulips were still blooming.

Walter and Molly Channing invited the neighbors of the winery to come and sample wine and meet each other on Sunday afternoon. The first leaves on the vines backlit in the afternnon sun and the smiling faces of adults and children alike made this a perfect beautiful setting. A good time was had by all.

Dan's North Fork

Who's Here:

Martin Silver

By Susan Simm

Martin Silver grew up one block from the water in Belle Harbor, Queens. Traces of his native borough's accent color his speech as he relates tales from his interesting life. I immediately notice that Marty doesn't stand on formality. Upon meeting him, I am struck by a warmth that makes me wish I had already known him a long time.

"We started coming out east when our kids were small and my in-laws had a summer place here in Aquebogue. One day my wife said to me, 'Wouldn't it be nice to live out here?' So we bought a piece of land in the same community, with a pond in the back, and built a small house on it."

That was twenty years ago. Thirteen years later, a house came on the market around the corner, this time on the bay. Marty, perhaps influenced by his childhood proximity to the beach, gravitates to water. "We looked on the South Fork before buying the first piece of property, around 1980, but it was already becoming developed. The North Fork was still pretty rural, with farmland everywhere. I really liked that," said Marty.

Marty's father, Lou Silver, founded Star Industries, an importer and supplier of wine and spirits in 1934, right after prohibition. Marty and his two brothers, Stanley and Robert, were indoctrinated with a strong work ethic early on.

"When we were growing up and had days off from school, my father would get my brothers and myself together and say, 'What are you guys planning to do today?' We'd answer, 'Oh pop, we're going to play some ball and then we're going to the beach' and he'd say, No. You're not. You're all coming to work with me. I have trucks that have to be loaded.' So he'd pile us in the car, early in the morning and we'd go and work in the warehouse loading trucks all day."

Today, Marty runs Star and says that the business has changed quite a bit since the old days. Star's new premium product, Argent Vodka (argent means "silver" in French), is the current centerpiece of Star. Distilled in Kansas in a special four-column still to remove all impurities, Argent is one of the purest on the market. "There are very few distillers left in the U.S. today. Look at what just happened to Seagram's. A big French corporation, Vivendi, bought it and now they are selling off pieces to French and British companies. Seagram's, as we've known it, will disappear. There will still be Seagram brands but they will be owned by the British and the French," said Marty.

Star also just inked a deal with the Mozart Chocolate Company of Austria which produces a chocolate liquer similar to one Seagram's sells. Marty jumped on this opportunity in the event that, "when and if Seagram's as we know it disappears, chocolate liquer is no longer available." A hole in the market will be opportunistically filled in this event.

Along the same lines, Star began importing a spirit from Brazil called cachaca. This product sprang into popularity when the Mexicans, according to Marty, "created a shortage of premium tequila and cachaca (pronounced kashasa), the world's largest selling spirit, filled the gap. The spirit is used to make a cocktail called caipirinha, a mix of fresh lime juice, sugar and cachaca, which is gaining in popularity, particulrly in New York. "The distiller we import our cachaca from is located in a port city called Pira Pora on a river in Brazil," said Marty. "Long ago, the Brazilian government imported three genuine Mississippi River Boats' to carry the sugar cane, from which cachaca is made, from the U.S." Today, Pira Pora Cachaca's label depicts one of these classic American crafts.

> "When we were growing up and had days off from school, my father would...say, 'You're all coming to work with me. I have trucks that have to be loaded.'"

Marty and his wife of 36 years, Dale, an attractive and outgoing blond, didn't go straight from Queens to Aquebogue. They stopped in Great Neck along the way and still maintains a house there. Marty loves to talk about the period in their lives when their family was young and they first moved to Nassau County. They moved to Kensington, an incorprated village in Great Neck, because it had a nice park, a pool and, most importantly, a softball field.

"I used to organize all the fathers and sons into teams but the village would never fix the field. So I said to Mayor Florman and the commissioners, 'Hey C'mon and fix the field!' But they'd say that they were too busy. They had other things to do, like maintain the streets. So my friend said, 'If you want it fixed, why don't you run for office. You could be the Park and Pool Commissioner and you could fix it.' No, no, no I said. But eventually he convinced me. I ran and guess what? I got elected!

"Then the mayor said, 'Now what I am I going to do with you? Why did you run?' I said, 'You know why I ran. I want the ballpark and pool fixed.' He said, 'All right. You can be the Park and Pool Commissioner. I'm appointing you.'

"So I tried to raise money. I wrote to the state and I really didn't know what I was getting into here. I would get letters back from the state and then one day I got a letter from then Governor Cuomo. It read, 'To the The Honorable Martin Silver.' I went to the mayor and said, 'What's this?' and he said, 'You've been elected by the people. You are now an honorable person. The governor knows that you're an elected official, you're a trustee of the village and you're the Commissioner of the Park and Pool. You do your job and, according to the government, you can be called honorable. You can even address yourself as the Honorable Martin Silver.' I said, 'I don't believe it.' He said, 'Don't worry. Neither will anybody else.'"

Marty did manage to get the baseball field fixed. "People still go the field today and remember that the Mr. Silver fixed it."

Marty and Dale have two daughters, Wendy and Laurie. Wendy is married to an attorney and lives in Great Neck and Laurie works for Ralph Lauren. In fact, this summer she will be at the East Hampton location. They frequently accompany their dad to fundraising events where he pours his company brands to support local charities. In fact, he's a familiar presence at many of this publication's charity events.

Marty loves golf and plays often at Rock Hill Country Club. "Me and my cronies, we have a lot of fun. We spend more time at the bar than we do on the course but that's OK because the club's a good customer of mine!" said Marty. Who's you're favorite golfer, I ask. "Well, everybody's favorite is Tiger Woods. I like Phil Michelson. He gets right up there and he wins tournaments, but he falters at the end. But he's still a good golfer and he's also a lefty golfer, like my late brother Stanley was," said Marty. He looks sad at the mention of his brother, whom he clearly loved and admired. " My big brother. He was also an excellent golfer, my big brother."

By The Glass...

Big News! Long Island is now a new American Viticultural Area. On May 15, appellation status was granted to Long Island. It is the first new AVA approved in New York in over ten years. The original application was submitted last July by Richard Olsen-Harbich, winemaker at the new Raphael Winery in Peconic, and Karen Meredith, co-owner of Southold's newest vineyard called Broadfields.

The new Long Island AVA encompasses approximately 1,170 square miles or 749,146 acres and overlaps the two exisiting AVA's in the North Fork of Long Island and The Hamptons, Long Island. The new Long Island AVA will not affect these pre-exisiting AVAs, already in use on the East End. It will provide local wine producers with another option for labeling their products, as well as added protection against possible consumer fraud.

Senator Charles E. Schumer emphasized his support by saying, "No other region in the Eastern United States has the quality of soil, length of growning season, moderate winter temperatures and necessary amount of natural precipitation as Long Island."

Although not as strict as the French Appellation system of regulations, the Federal AVA designation does require regional "truth in advertising" with regard to wine labeling. With the Long Island AVA in place, the words "Long Island" can only be used to label wines that contain at least 85% Long Island grown fruit.

"The success of any great wine region lies in its ability to protect regional purity and to provide the highest quality possible in every bottle," said Mr. Olsen Harbich. "This new AVA will help us achieve these goals."

New release at Pellegrini Vineyards: 1999 Pellegrini Vineyards Chardonnay. The trend toward less oakiness continues with this luscious wine. A round, full mouthfeel with delicate fruit flavores make our 1999 chardonnay one of its best so far. Extended aging on the lees and the use of puncheon-size barrels supports this delicacy by adding gently creaminess and the lightest hint of oak. Recommended with the finest seafood, poultry and cream-based pasta dishes.

The Harbes Family: All That Is Best In Produce And Family Values

By Roy Bradbrook

One of the unmistakable signs that summer is upon us is to drive along North Road in Mattituck and see that the Harbes farmstand is again open. Farmstands are one of the North Fork's attractions and visitors come from far and near to see the wonderful displays of the freshest local produce, displays which change with the seasons and culminate in autumn with a harvest festival of pumpkins and hayrides. It is the 'season of mists and mellow fruitfulness' that John Keats wrote of in his "Ode to Autumn."

What many visitors do not know is the heart-wrenching and heart-warming story behind the family widely regarded now one of the success stories of Long Island and whom the Suffolk Times named Business People of the Year.

Ed and Monica Harbes have seen times of trial and success in their busy lives. Monica, while only a very young child, was the victim of a terrible tragedy when both of her parents were killed in an automobile accident in Minnesota, leaving her and her eight siblings orphans. The children ranged from one and a half to thirteen years old. Their plight and their intense desire not to be split up touched the hearts of many and in particular a family in North Carolina, who took all of them into their home, where they grew up, still together. The story attained national prominence when Monica's family and their adoptive parents were featured in Life magazine in 1963.

When Monica was 13, difficult family circumstances forced her to leave her adoptive family and she came to live with an older sister on Long Island, where she met Ed on her first day at school. She told me, "We dated for a while in high school and then we met again on the campus of Suffolk Community College and it was then that we decided to marry and raise a family. Ed and I fell in love and we were married when we were twenty and we moved onto the farm. Ed comes from a long established farming family, who originally immigrated to New York from Germany back in the 1800's and then moved further and further east until they finally stopped at Mattituck."

Now, Ed and Monica could have settled for the simple life of farming the hundred or so acres they own and raising a couple of kids, but not them. When you meet Monica and Ed away from their daily farming life, you find a couple with quiet charm and style. Ed could well have spent his day behind an executive desk and Monica exudes grace, beauty and serenity. Elegant and slim, you would never expect to discover that she and Ed are the proud parents of eight, four boys and four girls.

As if raising a large family were not enough, Ed decided that conventional farming was not for him, "We grew a lot of potatoes and it soon became obvious that this was not the best way for the future unless you wanted to remain in the world of bulk sales to wholesalers and a precarious existence. I carried out a great deal of research and as a result decided to concentrate on developing and growing our signature super-sweet corn and also on what I call 'agritainment.' In the early days, some of our children sold corn by

What's In Store: Jens Flower Shop

By Susan Simm

Expect to be greeted by Audit, Calvin and Portia when you visit this beautiful and well-known Mattituck institution. They will be happy to see you and, if you really rate, they may even lick your face. Sounds like strange behavior for owners until you realize that these three are black labs. You might think that fact would detract from their roles as proprietors, but this is clearly not the case.

"People stop by just to visit the dogs," said Rebecca Jens on a recent sunny afternoon. "They have all grown up here and to them, this is home."

Jens has also been at home on the North Fork for 35 years. Rebecca Jens, the founder's daughter, took over the day to day operation of the business upon her father's death three years ago. Keeping abreast of the changes here on this rural peninsula is very important to Rebecca, who holds an undergraduate degree in business and is currently pursuing an MBA, but she "will always want to do something creative."

"The increasing diversification of our population here on the North Fork is bringing with it some changes in the retail market. More people are looking for the different, the unusual. That's what we specialize in. If you're looking for the oddball thing, chances are we have it or can get it for you. We have a very large selection of annuals and perennials and over eighty varieties of herbs."

There are many "oddballs" among those eighty. As I was standing there speaking with Rebecca, a customer came in and was thrilled to find creeping eucalyptus, obviously a specialty item. Rebecca has identified a niche market and works hard to fill the need.

Jens is also a full service florist and will deliver bouquets and arrangements all over the North Fork, often at a moment's notice. Their 'flower baskets' are a great alternative to the usual cut bouquet. These are filled with a combination of annuals and perennials that you can enjoy in the house for weeks (or forever, if you request an assortment of small houseplants) and can then be planted outside or transplanted into larger, individual containers as the plants grow.

Rebecca does all of the buying for the shop, greenhouses and garden center. "Now that it's spring, planting season is just starting and with Mother's Day over, plants are the main attraction. We also do a tremendous business with our glass gazing balls, which are ornaments for the garden. We probably have the best selection around. We carry every color and pattern, they're made in the states, and they're hand-blown. It's amazing to watch people's reaction to them because they are different, and you don't see them on every corner. Yet. But that's one of our goals!"

This time of year people are outside planting their gardens, they're giving gifts.

Jens does the flowers for a lot of vineyard weddings: one a weekend during the season, on average. "Vineyard weddings have become very popular during the past few years. It's really a beautiful way to go. A lot of people aren't from here; they are coming to utilize the beauty of the area. Fortunately, they use local merchants for their affairs."

Inside the florist shop, you will find an amazing array of gifts, ornaments, flowers and potpourri. "The Smell of Spring" and "Summer Sorbet," both potpourris by Aromatique, are wonderful warm weather scents and refresher oils are also available. Crabtree & Evelyn's extensive "Gardeners Collection" includes a hand scrub and "Outdoor Defense," a natural bug repelling body spray made with citronella.

Perfect as house gifts, you will also find a nice selection of Woodstock wind chimes, ceramic picture frames, hand-blown glass hummingbird feeders and live topiaries. A wonderful baby section includes piggy banks, frames, stuffed animals and hanging ornaments.

Jean Jens, a retired interior decorator and Rebecca's mom, has moved south to Virginia but still provides her own custom throw pillows and beautiful gilt-framed original oil paintings, the latter at very reasonable prices compared to some galleries.

A new item, mesh bags of beach glass, come in several different colors and would be beautiful displayed in a glass on a window sill. As an avid collector they immediately caught my eye, especially the hard-to-find dark blue pieces.

Rebecca's continuing commitment to helping Jens' customers find exactly what they want makes shopping there a personal experience. With economic downturns looming on the horizon, old-fashioned customer service is becoming more crucial than ever to the success of small businesses. That attention to detail will no doubt carry Jens through another 35 years.

LETTER FROM DAN

DURING THE YEARS I have published Dan's Papers, I have gotten to know a great many well-to-do people who have homes in the Hamptons. Most of them have not inherited their wealth, but have earned it in their lifetimes, usually through imagination, determination, talent, courage and, very often, luck. They are also for the most part easy going and friendly people, the sort that other people gravitate to be around.

It is not hard to figure that, in the scheme of things, this is a character trait that in a business setting can create an energy level also contributing to success.

A byproduct of all of this, as far as successful people are concerned, is a kind of amazement at what life has brought. Like everyone else, they put their pants on one leg at a time every morning. Like everyone else, they eat three meals a day. And then, left over, is all this money.

What do they do with it? Thus was the idea for this weekly magazine born.

What do they do with it? Sometimes charitable things, sometimes frivolous things, sometimes strange things. Sometimes just plain fun things. It's all here.

southofthehighway is about the fulfillment of the American Dream. About what happens when we get what we have been striving for. And about the grand humor of it all. I believe this is a unique magazine. I hope you enjoy it as much as we have enjoyed putting it together.

What will $50 million buy today?

DAVID CAMPBELL, a well known copper trader on Wall Street, is offering his 18,000 square foot Wainscott house for sale for $50,000,000. It comes on its own peninsula with more than 2,000 feet of waterfront on Georgica Pond, where, from the upper floors, there are views of the nearby estates of Steven Spielberg, Ron Perelman and Martha Stewart among others. It has the prerequisite private gate, with the long drive through 25 acres past a separate guest house, some barns, a tennis court and tennis pavillion, greenhouse, boathouse, private dock and waterside gazebo. In the basement is a wine cellar and a tasting room. The property has been on the market a little over a year and there have been nibbles, but so far no bites. The house was designed by architect Francis Fleetwood and is being shown by Sotheby's International, Dunemere and Allan M. Schneider. The current owner named the property ``Burnt Point," but you'd be free to change it if you wanted to. ■

IMAGINE THAT the charmingly handsome and dashingly debonair Cary Grant is your father. Now, imagine further that the vivacious, beautiful and funny actress Dyan Cannon is your mother. As destiny and genetics would have it, Jennifer Grant is not just another pretty face. Educated at Stanford University, she earned a degree in history and political science. Upon graduating, she found herself in the world of law. When law lacked the zip she was looking for, she became a chef (yes, she CAN COOK as well). Then in 1993, still searching, Jennifer came home, not surprisingly to acting, mesmerizing viewers with her role on Beverly Hills 90210. Talent, talent, talent. ■

The Sampsons

EPISODE I: How do you get to the Hamptons?

by Dan Rattiner

ON THURSDAY, Fairfield Sampson was having one of those power breakfasts at the Regency in Manhattan when the talk turned to the Hamptons.

"It still takes me two hours to get there," the Wall Street trader said as the waiter poured him a second cup of coffee. "But I avoid the traffic. I have a Hovercraft at the South Street Pier. The wife and kids come down. We can bang out of there at almost fifty knots. And year around. In complete comfort. I've had the main cabin done up to look like a turn of the century saloon."

Everyone at the table was quiet for awhile.

"We chopper out," the investment banker said. "Takes an hour."

"But not door to door," Fairfield Sampson said.

"Well, that's true," the banker said. "I guess if you figure that in its about an hour and twenty."

"I wonder what's the fastest way to get out to East Hampton?" the Wall Street trader said.

Now it was Friday evening about nine o'clock and Sampson was sitting in the back seat of a white Cessna private jet, and out the window he was watching the lights of the South Shore of Long Island whizz rapidly by below him. There was a full moon. He could easily make out the geography of the island. There was Lido Beach and Fire Island, there was Blue Point, where the Republican politicians used to have their headquarters. He was making amazing progress.

He clutched the pack on his lap tightly to his chest. "How much longer?" he asked the instructor standing next to him.

"I'll ask the pilot. Chet?" he shouted. "How much longer?"

"We've been up twenty two minutes. Should be another ten," the pilot shouted back.

Sampson still did not understand the reaction of his family when he told them what he planned to do that morning.

"That's the craziest thing I ever heard of," his wife Allison said. "I'm not going to allow you to do it."

"Dad, you have to count the time it takes to get to Teterboro Airport," his fifteen year old prep student son said.

"Teterboro is WEST of the city," he had explained with perfect logic. "That's AWAY from the Hamptons. In the other direction. You have to count the time from Teterboro, as if we lived there. In New Jersey."

"Do I HAVE to do this?" eighteen year old Jennifer asked.

"You don't have to do this," Alison assured her.

"Dad, we don't live in New Jersey," the son said.

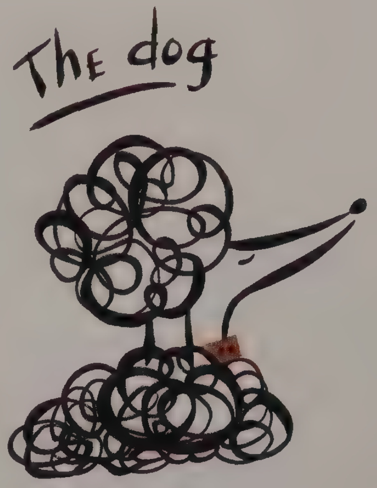
There was a pause.

"Does this mean none of you are coming?" Fairfield finally said.

"We're ready, sir," the instructor said.

Fairfield stood up and adjusted the straps around his sports jacket. The instructor, who had attached himself to one of the four upholstered armchairs inside the plane with what looked like a bungee cord, walked carefully over to the emergency door and turned the chrome wheel from the closed position to the open position. Suddenly, the wind was whistling in and the change of pressure hurt his ears.

Fairfield looked at his watch. They were just thirty two minutes out of Teterboro.



"Good luck, sir," the instructor said. Then he pushed Fairfield out the door, six thousand feet above Bridgehampton, Long Island.

At first, Fairfield just shut his eyes tight, gritted his teeth, and held his breath waiting to find out that he had painlessly been cut in half by the plane's wing. After a second, he opened one eye, looked down and took a peek. His right hand was still holding tightly onto the metal ring as the instructor had told him. Below that were his feet. He was still in one piece. He pulled the ring. Then, in a moment, there was the pop of nylon and a pull on his straps and he was floating gently through the rich summer nighttime air of the Hamptons.

Below him was the shoreline he knew so well. There was the Smith house, the Hotchkiss house, the Cohen house. And a little farther on, with all the lights on, even in the pool house, and underwater in the pool itself, just as he had ordered Caressa to do, his own house.

He sailed down and down, closer and closer, approaching his house from the west, just as the instructor said would happen.

This was going to work out perfectly. He cleared the chimney of the Reston house just next to his, sailed over the broad, mowed lawn, and then, directly in front of him, he saw the great forty foot Chinese Apple Blossom tree he had talked Reston into putting in just two weeks earlier. He was going to clear that too. Maybe. Maybe. No, he was not going to clear it. He was going to land IN it. And so he did, with a great grinding crunch, right in the very top.

There was blood on his leg. He could feel it, below the straps, running into his shoes. He struggled, swaying in the upper branches there, searching for his cellphone. Maybe it wasn't blood. Maybe he had peed in his pants.

"Hello?"

"The voice on the other end was his faithful housekeeper Caressa.

"Caressa, it's me."

"Mr. Fairfield? Is that you?"

"Yes."

"Then why don't you knock on the door? I let you in."

"I'm up in a tree."

"A tree?"

"You know that big tree that the Reston's have on their lawn?"

"The Restons have many trees."

"The one I told Mr. Reston about. That I had given you the name of the landscapers that were going to deliver and plant two weeks ago and you should make sure where it should go because neither Mr. Reston or myself would be here during the week?"

"The China Apple Blossing Tree?"

"That one."

There was a pause. "You up there?"

"Look out the window," he said.

About thirty seconds passed.

"I see you. You want me to call the police?"

"No."

"You very up high."

"Yes. Where's Roberto?"

"He went to the Jitney stop to pick up Mrs. Alison and the children. He be back."

"How soon?"

"Maybe ten minutes. He gone a while."

Sampson looked at his watch again. Another ten minutes would be fifty one minutes and if it took Roberto another ten minutes after that would still be one hour and one.

He smiled. Tomorrow night. Nick & Toni's. There would be six of them sitting around the dinner table. He'd edge the conversation over to what he had done. He'd just slip it in. One hour and one. ■

$3.2 Billion

THE MOST EXPENSIVE residential real estate transactions may be taking place in the Hamptons, but Larry A. Silverstein, a developer, has pulled off the biggest commercial real estate transaction with his purchase of the World Trade Center, the 10.6 million square foot office complex in downtown Manhattan. The seller was the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey.

The twin 110 story towers went for a cool $3.2 billion. The down payment was $616 million. "I'm thrilled to pieces," Silverstein told a New York Times reporter after the sale was made. "I've been looking at the Trade Center for years, thinking what a great piece of real estate, what a thrill it would be to own it."

Expensive Vacation

$100,000 FOR A FOUR BEDROOM HOUSE southofthehighway in the Hamptons? How about $20,000,000 for a week at the new International Space Station?

Businessman Dennis Tito of California blasted off from the Russian Space Center in Kazakstan one Sunday in the company of two Russian Cosmonauts, then spent the next seven days in the company of the two Russians and two American Astronauts already at the station enjoying himself — after about a day and a half of nausea — by basically keeping out of the way and not touching anything.

He had to sign an agreement saying he would not hold anyone liable for anything that happened to him during his space vacation, and if he broke anything he would pay for it. He had no tennis, golf, pool, sauna, massage or horseback riding, but he did get to float around a lot. Who will be next?

Look who's single again…

by C.J. Squires

SUMMER TIME IS HERE and everywhere there is the sweet smell of local flowers and the ocean air. Not… If you really are out here for the Hampton season more than likely it's the smell of the latest designer fragrance mixed in with good old human endorphins. You may swing your totally toned body to the sounds of the newest craze out here, reggae mixed with a lot of soul.

So now that we've established that you will spend most of your time checking out who is out here, let me give you a little advice. If you haven't found the man of your dreams let me remind you of some guys who are up for grabs. And some of them would love to be grabbed.

PUFFY AND J LO IN BETTER TIMES

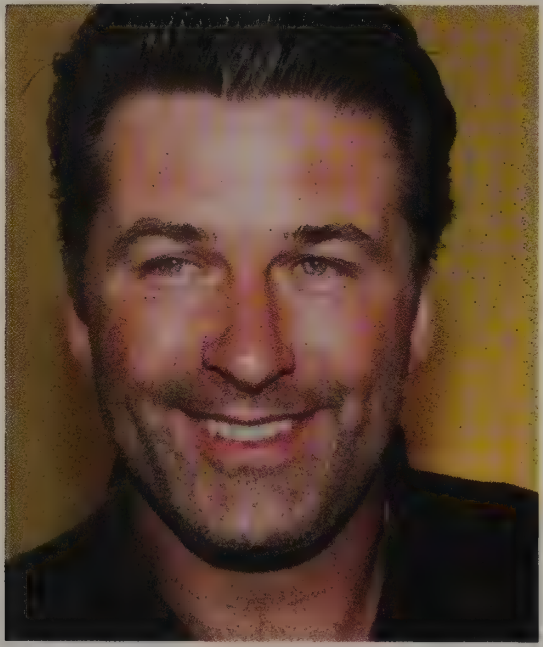
Sean Puffy Combs will probably never get over his thing for drop dead Jennifer Lopez (or J Lo, as he nicknamed her) and we don't blame him but honestly she is true to the truth but that's another story, so who is going to occupy his Hampton house this summer and be the Mrs. Puffy of the house and hostess of the legendary parties (guns checked at door don't forget.)? Mr. Combs may be reaching beyond his grasp but word and eyewitnesses have it that he was tripping all over himself to be of assistance to beautiful Naomi Campbell. At the Delay Hotel in Miami Miss Campbell was resting after falling off the golf cart (no, that's true, a golf cart!). She injured her leg (or was she pulling his leg) and as a fellow guest in the hotel he just happened to be right there, (thank goodness) and yes Puffy came to her aid and carried the supermodel from the restaurant to her wheelchair in the lobby. So we're not sure where this is going, but you never know with whom he will be out here.



BALDWIN

Now if your taste goes for the maturer man, a real man of men (that can be a real problem if you do believe that type of thing about yourself…) we've got the guy for you. Alec Baldwin is a homeowner in Amagansett; not really the Hamptons but close enough. He is mending a broken heart we're sure, after the divorce from Kim Bassinger. We really liked the two of them out here as homeowners and young parents but this is Hollywood East, folks and all good things sometimes really do come to an end. He's got money, looks, talent and according to many sources he apparently has been spending some time with just out of teen years Jennifer Love Hewitt (can that name be for real?). The very well built young actress is also starring in Mr. Baldwin's new movie (along with him acting and directing) in the Devil and Miss no, no, no only kidding. The Devil and Mr. Webster. But again if that doesn't work he's here. How about a cross between the both of them, then you would come up with Oscar winner Russell Crowe my personal choice. Yes, it's true, he not only broke bread with her here last summer at the Maidstone Arms but he also broke Meg Ryan's heart, but somehow I've forgiven him. He just seems to bring out the bad girl in you.

One problem standing in our way, he seems to be totally attracted to women who won't give him the time of day.

Enter exquisite Jennifer Connelly. Starring in the movie A Beautiful Mind with him and ignoring him all the rest of the time. This is driving him bloody (he is from Australia) mad. She isn't buying any of it.

What woman doesn't know this? Ignore them and they come running. So he's in the running, ladies, when he makes his yearly trip out here for a hit and run. And now gentlemen out there who are waiting for your available list this summer, dah, Jennifer Lopez, Kim Bassinger and Meg Ryan. Good Luck and Happy Hunting. ■

Rock Away

THE OCEAN points the way. Gently lapping waves carve a private cove out of pastel colored rocks the size and shape of giant ostrich eggs. A solitary canoe drifts onto powder fine sand, and a dark haired swimmer dives naked into the cool water splashing about in the surf like a boy. When he exhausts himself, he flings his legs onto the sandy beach, catapulting his upper body backward into the granular silica, and contemplates the vast sky. A small helicopter circles overhead, landing on the ledge just above, in time for cocktails. Then the solitary swimmer, body brown from the sun, reaches beneath the covering of his canoe for his evening clothes, and dresses for dinner. He makes his way up the cliff, the smoothness of the elliptical stone eggs caressing his bare feet, and slowly ascends at the top. Looking out to sea from his perch at the edge of the grassy knoll, he smiles as his little boat bobs, moved to and fro by the gentle breeze in the private cove below. The honeysuckle is in bloom and the night air feels cool against his cheek. Suddenly, he feels the gentle touch of a warm hand upon his back. The familiar smell of exotic perfume wafting gently towards him, the hostess slips her arm through his, and smiling, hands him a drink. Without a sound, they walk together toward the waiting guests. ■

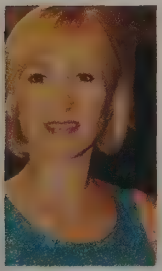
...When You Want the Look

by Katlean de Monchy



WHAT'S THE CRITERIA?

1. If you have to ask the price - you can't afford it

2. If it's readily available you don't want it

We kick off summer with Karl Lagerfeld, arguably the world's most influential designer over the last decade. Synchronicity played a part for Karl in that he was born the same year that Coco Chanel retired and was destined to take over Chanel's reins in 1983. His signature is his pony tail and sunglasses but his most prominent signature has been the Chanel C's.

ON BEAUTY

"Women like to be beautiful... everything is important, it's the total look, that goes beyond the clothes. It goes into the face, the eyes, the fingers, everything. It could be a pearl near the eye like a frozen tear.

ON ELEMENTS OF HIS STYLE

"I use them in other mixes. Like people mix music today. Sport Elements with Evening Elements, all the elements are there but used in a way that they haven't been used in the past."

Karl Lagerfeld

"All the Elements are there but used in a way that they haven't been used in the past."

Self portrait of Karl Lagerfeld

ON INSPIRATION

"Light is inspiring. They're in modern art- they're all over the city and they have nice colors. I realized the idea of walking on light. The best thing in life is to be light- who wants to be heavy in the mind?"

ON PARISIAN CHIC MODELS

"the models are modern chic - the attitude of the girls is inspiring. They are not the supermodels of the past who play only themselves. These girls play to the identity of the house, they help you express the attitude of one place."

GALLUCCIO ESTATE VINEYARDS

Red with lamb.
White with sea bass.
(Doesn't anyone eat pizza anymore?)

Consider for a moment that sharing a classic Bordeaux blend with that special someone is itself occasion enough—even when the menu doesn't include crown roast of lamb. The French have known this for centuries, experiencing both the pure enjoyment and healthful benefits of moderate wine consumption at nearly every meal.

Our patio and great lawn are open for your afternoon picnic or lounging pleasure.

GARNET GRISTINA

Of course, we can't guarantee you'll live longer drinking wine, as the French paradox suggests. However, we think there is a lot to be said for simply living better.

So, in that spirit, we might suggest a full-bodied, yet smooth Gristina Garnet with your next Sicilian with extra cheese.

And enjoy.

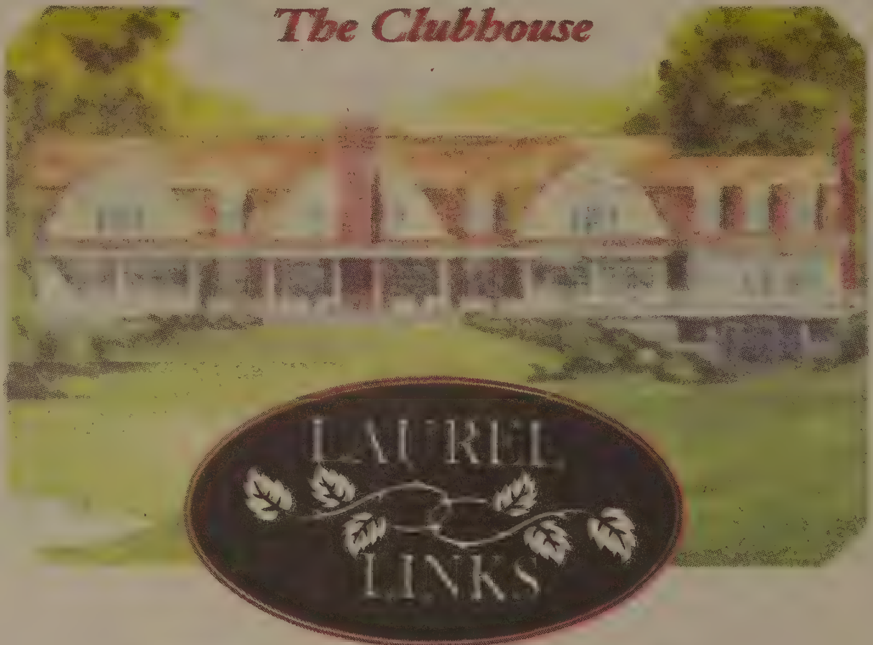
LONG ISLAND'S NEWEST COUNTRY CLUB

LAUREL LINKS COUNTRY CLUB • LAUREL • LONG ISLAND • NEW YORK

The elegant clubhouse will feature all amenities normally associated with private club life. A gracious foyer leads to the main dining areas including a spectacular grill room and more formal dining room both with expansive views of the golf course. Lovely french doors open from the dining areas to a large stone terrace.



Several years in the planning, Laurel Links Country Club now has its approvals and financing in place and is scheduled to open in the autumn of 2002! The 226-acre property is located in Laurel and will utilize 156 acres for its 7,002 yard layout. The remainder of the property will be devoted to 29 homesites and open space.

Members can also enjoy an olympic size swimming pool with separate pool house facility as well as HarTru tennis courts.

THE NORTH

THE NATURAL CHOICE

Claire Copersino opened The Natural Choice in Southold on February 12 of this year. Along with manager Kathleen Ruggerio, Claire runs her store as "an extension of our family lifestyle. It was born from the desire to share the many benefits that we have experienced by shifting to a more natural and organic way of life," said Claire.

The community has welcomed the newcomers and the two women frequently hear about how much a store like this was needed in the village.

"We aim to keep a pulse on what the community needs from us and gear ourselves accordingly." Since opening, the emphasis has been on expanding the prepared foods department, a lead Claire says she took from her customers.

Great taste is, unfortunately, something wholesome foods often lack. Claire is well aware of this fact. "We know that it is hard to find wholesome prepared foods and this is most important but it's got to taste really good! We concentrate on flavor and variety."

The Natural Choice offers a wide selection of the ever-popular wrap sandwiches, both vegetarian and non-vegetarian, delicious salads (including the very popular yellowfin tuna salad) and soups and healthy bakery items.

The store will be featuring more and more local organic produce, both as retail items and also in their prepared foods. Claire believes in supporting the organic farming community and feels lucky to have such a great selection to choose from here on the North Fork.

Yoga classes, both group and private, are also being offered in a studio adjoining the store.

"My husband Rocco and I met in a health food store and came together believing passionately in the great changes that people can affect in their health and well-being by living and eating more consciously," said Claire. "Our choices define our future, hence 'The Natural Choice.'"

Organic Rice and Bean Salad

This delicious, dairy-free salad is perfect for the coming months of warm weather.

1 cup organic dried blackbeans, soaked overnight in filtered water.
1 cup organic brown Basmati rice
2 medium organic carrots, grated
1 bunch organic scallions, thinly sliced
1 cup organic raisins or currents
Organic tamari
Organic toasted sesame oil
Organic sesame seeds

1. Drain beans, rinse and put in a pot large enough to hold them covered with plenty of water. Bring to a boil, cover and simmer on low heat for about 1 1/4 hours or until cooked through but not mushy. Drain and allow to cool.

2. Place rice in a small pot with 1 1/4 cups water, cover and bring to a boil. Reduce to simmer. With cover on, cook for about 20 minutes or until rice has absorbed all of the water. Place in bowl and fluff with fork. Allow to cool.

3. Mix in beans, carrots, scallions and raisins. Splash with tamari and sesame oil to taste. Sprinkle with sesame seeds and serve.

Organic Spelt Banana Bread

An all natural, dairy-free bread that is moist and tasty. Perfect for breakfast.

3 very ripe bananas
Juice of 1 organic lemon (or 2 Tbs. organic lemon juice
1/2 cup safflower oil
1/2 cup organic maple syrup
1/2 organic spelt flour
1/4 cup organic brown rice
1 1/2 tsp. non-aluminum baking powder
1/2 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. sea salt
1/2 tsp. ground cardamon
1/2 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/2 cup organic chopped walnuts

Preparation

Preheat oven to 375 degrees F

1. Mash bananas and lemon juice together in large bowl with a fork. Add oil and maple syrup and stir with a wooden spoon. Mix well.

2. Measure in all dry ingredients apart from nuts and stir just until dry and liquid ingredients are combined. Fold in walnuts.

3. Coat loaf pan with safflower oil and spoon batter into pan and bake for about 25-35 minutes, testing for done-ness by insering a toothpick in the center of loaf. When toothpick comes out clean, the bread is ready.

4. Let cool a few minutes in pan, then pop out onto wire rack to cool completely. The bread does taste particularly good warm, so it may not make until it cools!
Bon Apetit!

Feed Me Clean Water! I Live In The Peconic Estuary

I am an osprey, blue heron, snowy egret, oyster, bay scallop, clam, alewife, horseshoe crab, hermit crab... Well, it's a good bet you can name a dozen or more marine animals like me who live in the Peconic Estuary. Do you make the effort to see that I live in clean water? Here's a little test for you.

Q: Do you wash your car in your backyard?

A. Washing your car on the lawn, on a porous surface (or at a car wash and not on a paved driveway), will keep that oily, soapy, gunk from running down the street into a storm drain and directly into the Peconic Estuary, harming and killing marine life. Better yet, use no detergent.

Will you do your part to help our local waters clean?

Q: Do you garden with native plants?

A. Keeping a garden of native plants will go a long way towards keeping polluting fertilizers, herbicides and pesticides out of our local waters. Native plants require less water, and no killer chemicals which, after a rainstorm, can wash onto the pavement

Q: Do you feed wild shore birds?

A. Feeding wild waterfowl may make them sick – and it pollutes our local waters. A major water polluter is the bacteria in fecal material from waterfowl, pets, other animals, and from faulty septic systems. This can result in beaches being closed to swimming, fishing, and shellfishing. Will you do your part to help keep the Peconic Estuary clean?

Q: Do you pick up plastic beach wash-ups?

A. Picking up marine debris that has washed-up on our shores goes a long way to keeping our riversides and beaches clean, unspoiled, and safe.. Plastics take 500 years to decompose. Floating debris can harm and kill marine life. It is an ugly symbol of environmental degradation. Will you do your part to help keep our waters clean?

Post Card Project

This Memorial Day weekend, over 1,000 children and their parents will be participating in a Community Mosaic Festival, sponsored by the Riverhead Arts Council, in downtown Riverhead. The event is slated for noon to 5 p.m. on Sunday, May 27.

Part of the happenings will be a picnic table where kids can come and sit and decorate postcards and address postcards to friends and family – with special messages for all of us on ways to help keep our irreplaceable Peconic Estuary clean.

We thank you for participating in a Downtown Riverhead Stormwater Management Project developed by Cornell Cooperative Extension of Suffolk County Marine Program with funding from the US Environmental Protection Agency.

Atlantis Explorer : Enjoyable Marine Exploration And Education

Atlantis Marine World, which operates the delightful Aquarium in Riverhead that already has entranced thousands of children and adults in its first year of existence, allows an even closer look at the mysteries of the sea through the hands-on experiences they offer on trips that take you on their purpose built 75 seat craft through the Peconic estuary.

Twice a day, at 11.30 am and again at 2.00 pm you can join and listen and watch as marine biologists from Cornell Cooperative talk about the different species of wildlife you may encounter. Cornell Cooperative is a community education component extension of Cornell University and has conducted science based educational experiences in many parts of the US, Canada and Japan.

This is not a dry-as-dust presentation by any means, as we found on a recent Saturday afternoon when the majority of the passengers were six to eight year olds celebrating the birthday of one of their friends. As we very slowly pulled away from the dock, making sure to obey the strict 'no wake' speed limit, we talked with Meredith and Catherine, two of the team of biologist guides. Both have degrees in marine biology and plan eventually to return to study for higher degrees. Meredith explained that she has been involved in these tours from the very beginning and that most trips in the summer are very full. Sometimes the boat is used exclusively for a school trip and these are more study focused and intensive than the general trips.

Meredith and Catherine both have a great way with children and they soon had all of them interested in what they were likely to see. The center of the boat holds a display tank and area where exhibits can be studied and to start with Meredith showed the children the large horseshoe crab they had already brought on board. At first, there was a degree of reluctance, some were far from ready to touch and look closely at this scary looking animal but Meredith explained away a lot of the fables about them biting or stinging and showed just how their body worked and the multitude of tiny eyes it possesses. When they heard that these animals existed on earth before the dinosaurs you could hear a gasp of awe from the partygoers.

As the boat slowly passed Indian Island golf club we came to the first of the traps they had in place in the estuary. Whelks of all sizes proved very interesting to the children and not as scary and were thoroughly examined before we landed at a secluded sandy beach in Hubbard's Bay where a walk on the beach allowed everyone to enjoy the peace and tranquility of the spot and also to prospect, under careful supervision, for more specimens to examine. Meredith also explained how this beach was totally natural because of the balance between water, sand and the natural plant growth

The second trap over near the North Fork coastline produced crabs and starfish and by now virtually all doubts about handling had gone away so, after being shown how to hold them correctly to avoid hurting or damaging them, small and large crabs and a starfish were proudly passed from hand to hand.

It was fascinating on the trip to observe small children as they moved from being, in some cases, very dubious about the desirability of touching these strange creatures to increasing boldness and finally total absorption in them. The naturalist guides balanced just the right level of jolliness mixed with instruction so each of the birthday party left the boat happy and almost certainly having learned more about the wonders of what lies beneath the waters of the earth. They certainly kept totally interested and entertained for the whole of the two hour trip which, as anyone who has ever organized a children's' party will agree was a great benefit for the parents!

Apart from the interesting study of the marine life, as the Atlantis Explorer slowly passes along the Peconic and out into the bay there is a special opportunity on this trip to see this part of Long Island from a different perspective than we normally enjoy and to enjoy the very real beauty of the water and the shoreline.

Turning learning experiences into pleasurable events is now a major part of education. The availability of showplaces such as the Atlantis Marine World aquarium together with an opportunity on the Atlantis Explorer to not only see but to touch and hold marine life and to learn a little more of the mysteries of the marvelous world we live in is a great benefit to the region. Go and enjoy this river trip, for whether you are eight or eighty you will almost certainly come away full of wonder at the beauties of the sea and land and of this beautiful part of the world in which we are privileged to live.

Porto Bello Restaurant

Front Street,Greenport
477-1717

Restaurant reviewers who gush about how fabulous the food is tend to bore me. They rave on and on about this sauce and that salad and lose credibility with every bite. So how does this apply to Porto Bello? Here I am about to commit the same crime.

The exterior of the building that currently houses Porto Bello is rather non-descript and belies the warmth found within. White napery, sun-washed walls with gilt framed oils and colorful carpeting glow while also keeping noise levels to a minimum. The owner, Diana Walters, greets us so warmly we feel like old friends.

From the first appetizer sampled it was readily apparent that a deft hand was in the kitchen. That hand belongs to Executive Chef Jennifer Raymond, a Southold native and graduate of the Culinary Institute of America. Ms. Raymond likes to experiment with new ideas, such as salmon filet with a honey dijon glaze and strawberry shortcake made with lemon and ginger, but does equal justice to such favorites as clams casino and grilled portabello mushroom served over a delicate tangle of greens topped with roasted peppers and a light balsamic vinaigrette. These were very tasty but the often run-of-the-mill mussels in a white wine broth were the best this critic has ever eaten. Garlic and herb laden, the broth was superb and the mussels exceptionally fresh.

Salads are included with all entrees and are tossed in a balsamic dressing lightly infused with herbs. Optional are the Caesar and Gorgonzola salads. If you love Caesar salad, spring for the extra $6.95. This one is worth every penny, not overladen with creamy dressing and topped with crunchy, homemade croutons.

The big news here is pasta. Wow! The Rigatoni alla Vodka was magnificent. I will return for this dish more than once. Proscuitto, garlic, tomatoes, vodka and cream are tossed with Parmesan cheese in this fabulous creation. Equal kudos go to the Penne alla Mimmo, a combination of marsala wine, mushrooms, proscuitto, fresh mozzerella, ground beef and veal, tomatoes and a touch of cream. The Spaghetti Bolognese here is a sophisticated version of what you normally encounter in Italian restaurants. The texture is creamy and the taste refined, not a hint of acid in sight.

Porto Bello offers specials nightly. The aforementioned salmon is highly recommended. It was cooked perfectly and the honey dijon glaze was a refreshing change from the more typical teriyaki preparation. Other entrée must-tries are the Veal Francaise, Chicken Gismondo and often-maligned Grilled Veal Chop, here served atop a saute of garlic greens. The Francaise was classic and absolutely delicious. The kitchen is very accomodating and chances are they would be happy to make the dish with chicken if you'd prefer.

The Chicken Gismondo, while the sauce was lemony and luscious, was a tad too garlicky for me but probably not for a real garlic lover. The Veal Chop was tender, still pink inside and sublime sitting on top of its nest of greens. There is an Aged New York Shell Steak, and while frequently an afterthought at Italian spots, I plan to try this in the future based on the quality of the meats in the other prepartions. The non-pasta entrees are escorted by a steamed mix of spring vegetables including aspargus and little red new potatoes, nicely roasted. Again, just a little less garlic here would be a welcome reprieve, but the freshness of the ingredients is, across the board, first rate.

Desserts here are homemade here. The tiramisu is creamy and not overly sweet and the pecan torte was wonderful. Also available are the usual tartufos and spumonis. Pass on these, although they are fine, and head for the two mentioned above for a real treat.

Porto Bello's wine list features many local wines as well as a nice selection of moderately priced Italian, Californian and French bottles. The pouring house red, a delightful, round Montepulciano would be as at home with that aged steak as it was with the succulent veal chop. A Macari Reserve Chardonnay, one of the winery's premium offerings, was full-bodied enough to stand up to the clams and the salmon.

Porto Bello means 'beautiful port' in Italian. This restaurant was so named because its original location, at the Stirling Harbor Marina in Greenport, was on the water. The former spot had beautiful views and a seating capacity of 125, but a rent hike caused owner's Diana and her mom, Francesca DiVello, to decide to move. The restaurant has been at its present location, on Front Street in Greenport, for about a year and a half and they are actively looking for a new waterfront spot.

Even though Diana misses her previous location, she has noted with characteristic optimism that the terrace at the present location is a great place to catch the fireworks during the carnival presently in progress in next door. At Porto Bello, whether the glass contains chardonnay, merlot or Pellegrino, it is never "half empty."

Revisiting The Civil War

By Janet Berg

The Hallockville Museum Farm and Folklife Center on Sound Avenue in Riverhead hosted its fifth annual Civil War Encampment over the weekend of May 20.

As I pulled into the parking lot, the year 2001, adjacent to the 1840's Hudson House, I was blasted by contradictory sounds – the firing of artillery cannons, and the honking of car horns that it set off.

Re-enactors, who played roles of civilians and the military, spent three days on the Riverhead farm, sleeping in reproductions of period tents, demonstrating battle drills, scenarios, and aspects of camp and social life of the era.

Preceding the big Memorial Day Weekend, spectators walked aimlessly on the grounds, surveying living history around them. The original name of Memorial Day was "Decoration Day" because after the war, people would decorate the graves. It is a day to be thankful to the many men and women who sacrificed so much to save our country.

In 1860 there were 18 free states and 15 slave states. Lincoln called it "a house divided." The Civil War began April 1861 and lasted four years, and until the end of the war, it was mostly made up of volunteers, who believed in the concept of a "union." If the union had dissolved after the war, this never would have been the country it is now-one-united.

Most historians believe that the war resulted from economic rivalry between the industrial north and the agricultural south and that slavery was the second basic cause. It is a unique war because it divided the people of the United States, so that in many families brother fought against brother.

One of the re-enactors informed me that there were about 10,000 battles and that the bloodshed left a heritage of grief and bitterness that remains even today.

The civil war fascinates people more than any other period in United States history, because of the "human side" of the war – the men who wore the confederate gray uniforms and the blue uniforms of the union. A century later, children would still mimic that war, playing army. As a baby boomer, I recall myself, playing Civil War with my older brother, who would always say, "I'll be Lee and you be Grant."

Many colorful leaders and heroes have come out of this war, including some outstanding figures, such as Abraham Lincoln the 16th President of the United States, and Robert E. Lee, a great, compassionate and devoted general. Ulysses S. Grant, Philip H. Sheridan, "Stonewall" Jackson, Nathan Bedford Forrest, and William T. Sherman, who coined the phrase, "War is hell," were leaders of the Confederate Army.

Almost one hundred and forty years later, I stood in the bright sunshine watching small children drawn to the two friendly cows, Nettie and Emma, and women wearing long dresses and bonnets, stroll under the shade trees on a mellow Riverhead farm. Aromatic smells filled the air, as chicken cooked on open grills and people living lives of 19th century figures were striving toward authenticity.

As I looked around, I scanned the bedding once used, the canteens and cooking utensils, the medical supplies used by surgeons in the medical tent, and could only imagine troops with all these supplies under dismal conditions, travelling horseback on dirt roads.

I was curious about the re-enactors who played the parts of soldiers and wondered why they wanted to do this. They let me believe that they enjoyed educating the public and becoming a "living historian." Crossing through the grass, I ran into Private George Revere. "You know," he said, like in "Paul Revere" of the 9th Virginia infantry. He tipped his hat and showed the markings, explained how they got the colors for his jacket made out of berries, and pointed to his jean cloth pants. "These are cooler than the blue wool uniforms," he boasted.

"About the war," he said, "The Northerners thought it was a civil war, but the southerners were seceding and thought of it as a revolution. We were just protecting our way of life; 97% of us didn't know what slaves were. And the north was taxing us to death and then they'd trade what we sold them to Europe and make 15 times more than us."

Over by the tents I found a group of confederates to speak with AKA, First Sgt. Mark Burnette, Captain James Waller, Corporal Joe McMichaels, Private Albert Waldron, Walter Schultz, Bob Walsh, Kyle Dougherty, Brian Miller, William Valente and Jimmy Martinez.

I inquired: "Is there a different outlook on the civil war in the south compared to the north? A: "Here there is a lot of diversity to celebrate. It's different in the south, where you and your grandfathers and great grandfathers grew up. During the civil war, one out of every five southern white males was wounded or died in the war. The state of Mississippi had to spend 30% of its state budget after the war on artificial arms and legs alone. The cities of Atlanta, and Millridge, Georgia, and Columbia. S.C., were burned. Over 300,00 people down south of a population of only 4 million lost their lives. Figure out the percentages. Today, if 20 million Americans died, it would be monumental. "Well, that's what it was to the south."

"Aside from losing all those people, they were occupied after the war, and had to come back with northern troops stationed in southern cities. They had to come back after war and take the buttons off their uniforms and cover up the confederate symbols; could not fly the confederate flag, couldn't do anything against the law, so they had a 10 year period of time to dwell upon it."

Where does the confederate flag fly today? He answered, "I believe only in the state of Mississippi."

"People ask if they still act like the war is going on down there. I answer, "No. But, do they still remember it? Oh, yes." The city of Vicksburg didn't celebrate July 4th until 1945 because that's the day they surrendered to Grant.

"We lost more Americans in the Civil War than were lost in WWI, WWII, Korea, Vietnam, Spanish American War, Mexican American War, The War of 1812, and the Revolution, combined. We lost 620,000 total soldiers; we don't even know how many civilians died. But the total country population was only 36 million. The north population of 23 million lost about 350,000 people; the south lost almost 300,000 people out of a population of only four million.

I asked, "Was hand to hand combat the problem?" "Just a part," he answered as if living the past. "These rifles are set at 900 yards, but we didn't have radios, and phones, so If I give a command to a regiment of hundreds and hundreds of men, firing, and all I have is a flag a bugle and drums, I've got to keep everybody packed in tight, because if I tell everybody to hide behind a tree, I'd have them spread out between here and Huntington. And even though that's a bad thing to do, keep them as open targets, but that's all you can do to keep them together so they can move and shoot when you want them to at your command.

"Other problems – all the wounded soldiers; the doctor sticks his dirty fingers in the wounds, wipes off his instrument on his coat, and goes to the next patient. He doesn't know about bacteria. They lived in the medical dark ages where we'd lose 10,000 men a month in camp from disease, which was the biggest killer in the civil war. There was a better chance of dying in camp as out on the battlefield, even though it was considered the first modern war.

"This was the first time the telegraph was being used, railroads were being used to a wide scale, large armies of over 100,000 men, the first time machine guns were used, ironclad warships, like the Monitor, and so on and so on. So, modern technology is crashing on these poor people rapidly, and because there isn't instantaneous tactics, they were facing rapid-fire weapons that wiped people out in large numbers.

"The real story of these guys," he continued, "is that these guys stayed and fought. And while they endured what they did, many didn't get paid for up to six months, while the dollar was devaluating. By 1864 a cup of coffee in Richmond cost $5. A Private's pay was $12 a month. And if you're sending it back to your family, a bar of soap would cost them one sixth of your pay."

Although it is well known that the confederate soldiers made it up as far north as Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, the re-enactor informed me that in November of 1864, ten confederate agents came to New York to burn the city down, but only succeeded in setting fires to a couple of hotels. They were captured soon after.

I asked about Lee's reputation as a compassionate general, and the man in gray answered, "He was sensitive to what was going on, but he was very professional general at the same time. "He knew what the side of the road and this proved to be a great success. From these modest beginnings grew the farmstands of today. As time went on I saw that people coming out to the North Fork really wanted things to enjoy the beautiful surroundings so it was a natural progression then for us to move on to selling roasted corn, building a corn maze and offering hayrides in the fall," he said.

The Harbes farmstands can now be found in Cutchogue and Jamesport as well as in Aquebogue. Operating them means that the family is totally involved for long hours each day and on every day of the week during the summer and fall. As you talk with them, it is apparent that despite their demanding schedule, this is still something they very much enjoy and where they are always seeking new ways to bring enjoyment to their customers.

The hard life of farming and agritainment has not diminished the time and love. Ed and Monica have lavished on their children as they have grown up. While, like all parents they are hesitant to single out any one, they cannot help sounding proud as they tell you about their eldest son Jason, one of the original child sellers of corn by the roadside and who now is due to graduate this year from Harvard with a degree in government.

Today, most family stories you read of in the media today are, regrettably, sad ones, so it is wonderful for a change to be able to tell something of the story of the Harbes family, a credit to their community and a wonderful example of how a childhood tragedy has had a very happy ending.

had to be done. There's actually an incident that happened during the Battle of Antietam, when a young boy, an artilleryman, runs up to Lee, after half the people are killed, all war torn and dirty, and asks 'Don't you recognize me? I'm your son.'" And Lee tells his son to go back and fight. 'We must all do our duty.'" "That's how intense this war was.

"I think one of the best lines was in Virginia at the end of the war. Both armies were camped out by the river during the winter and some of the northerner soldiers who were getting ready to get out of the army, as their enlistment would be up, were yelling across the river, "Hey, Johnny Reb, we're getting ready to go home. "When are you going home?" And the southerners answered back, "We are home."

On that note, I moseyed on over to the men in blue standing under the majestic flags waving around them. They were AKA, Josiah McCartney, Robert McKay, and "Patrick Collins, at your service, maam."

Since they informed me that about 900 children from Long Island schools visited the day before, asking 900 questions, I figured I would give them a break and ask questions about their appearance. When I looked at one re-enactor, holding an oversized tin cup in his hand, he said, "Oh," this?" holding up the heavy cup. "My wife got it all cleaned up and shiny for me, but it just didn't look right; so I blackened it over the campfire and now it's perfect," he smiled.

About the uniforms? they thought theirs were cooler than the confederates. They wore four-button sack coats with roll type collars. The union hat or kepi was made of navy wool, their army "issued shirts" were white muslin, Yankee navy blue military trousers, and shoes were called brogans. "It's the first time they made right and left shoes," one of the soldiers informed me.

Some more trivia, another told me, "All the soldiers carried a "little housewife" sewing kit because they did their own tailoring.

"A major problem, as the war went on, many of the blue cloth uniforms faded to gray (similar to the Richmond gray of the confederates), creating a problem on the battlefields.

When one of the soldiers offered me something to eat (I think he called a "hard tack"), which looked like an old piece of bread that REALLY was left over from the civil War, I passed. But, I did take with me, a reminder of a great American lesson in history.

Shop 'til You Drop...With Maria Tennariello

Well here it is, the big weekend to kick off the summer season…There is plenty to do, places to go and lot's of shopping. Let's do it!

Starting off in Westhampton Beach, on Main Street, check out Westhampton T-Shirts, their hot summer sale that is going on right now. Stock up on super heavyweight cotton sweatshirts and cool T-shirt's that are now 50% to 70% off regular prices…

A new store that has just opened on Main Street and Hampton Road in Southampton is barr + barr, designers of vintage-style luxury handbags. They will carry the complete summer line of barr + barr bags and will be open for your convenience seven days a week. Handmade in Florence and Paris by master craftsmen, barr + barr bags are inspired by vintage designs from the 1920's through the 1950's. Legendary bag artisans have magnificently reproduced these antique treasures in the finest materials available, creating bags which are made to last a lifetime.

A new shop in the courtyard on Jobs Lane in Southampton has just opened. Ajia, is having its Memorial Day Grand Opening "La Dolce Vita" Champagne Celebration and is offering music, cocktails and all around fun in addition to a 10% discount for all purchases made this weekend. Currently there is a collection of designer items tailored your to your taste with styles that range from light and airy daytime attire to Hot, yet very cool, nightime collection. In addition look for fashionable beach bags, hats and mats with affordable price tags. Apart from their clothing, they plan to introduce their collection of antique refurbishments, home and garden furnishings. Call for information at 631-259-8800.

PINE

(Semi-Private and Public Course Golf holes)

From the wooded, pristine courses of the Pine Barrens to the magnificent links layouts of the Twin Forks, golfers on the East End are blessed with a stunning variety of courses to match wits against.

With 15 full length courses and a sprinkling of quality par three layouts, the East End has golfers saying Myrtle Who?

To celebrate the area's emergence as a golfers paradise, Dan's Papers introduces a contest to determine the elite 18 holes of the East End.

Send in your choices for your favorite holes by filling in the ballot below.

(Comments explaining your choices are welcome)

GOLFING

By Bob Ballot

Ask a golfer to name his or her top destination for a historical pilgrimage and you'll quickly get used to the name St. Andrews. Ask a non-golfer the same question and you will frequently meet with Colonial Williamsburg. But just as Scotland also offers centuries of fascinating cultural and military history, Colonial Williamsburg is synonymous with great golf.

Nearly a dozen superb layouts dot this beautifully wooded peninsula of early Americana. The colonization by golf developers of the 35 x 15-mile swath bounded by the York and James Rivers can be traced to 1963. That year marked the opening of Robert Trent Jones' Golden Horseshoe Gold course. Administered by the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation — as is its sister Green course, which opened in 1992 — the Gold recently emerged from a year-long restoration. The renovations have kept the narrow, tree-lined course comfortably ahead of the advantages conferred by souped-up equipment.

The day I arrived to play the Gold course, solo, I was incessantly informed I'd be playing with a party named Dell. After awhile I found it odd that at every turn, the pro shop manager, starter, even the bag boys were all saying the same thing: "Oh, you're playing with Dell." As I made a second trip to the starter's booth as my tee-time approached I inquired if I would be playing alone, since no one was to be seen. The answer was the same, but this time with a slight wrinkle.

"Didn't anyone tell you you're playing with Dell?"

Well, yeah they did, but where is this Dell group?

"Oh, don't you know Del? Del Snyder is a legend down here. He's been the club pro for 25 years. Before that he was Sam Snead's personal assistant at the Greenbrier." Gulp.

And sure enough, the man materialized right behind me, extending an affable right hand. "I'm Del Snyder, welcome to the Golden Horseshoe . . . . What's your handicap?" Tempting as it was to say, "no God-given golf talent," I bit my tongue and quickly made plain that I was an enthusiastic golfer, not a particularly adept one.

Now, ordinarily I jump at the opportunity to play from the back tees. Lose a few balls, hit a few heroic shots. But here I tried to angle Del into playing the forward men's tees. I did not want to have to drag this legend of Southern golf around with me in the trees all day. A true southern gentleman, Del said fine.

Del drilled his first tee-shot down the middle of the fairway, and his second, and his third . . . As for me, I was thrilled not to hit any shots sideways.

After the stage fright of the first hole subsided, the course's character started to make a firm impression. Surprisingly hilly for land sitting between two wide rivers not far from Chesapeake Bay, the Golden Horseshoe features ravines, breathtaking elevated tees and, occasionally, ski-slope fairways.

The beautiful second hole combines all these elements. This par-5 dogleg right travels down a slight grade until the hole begins to bend. Then the bottom falls out of the fairway. Since water guards the front of the green, you have two options on your approach. Blast away and hope to carry the water, 210 yards from the turn. Or hit a layup shot 150 yards down the plummeting fairway. Be careful with anything but a pitching wedge though, those 150 yards go fast! The elevated green cants from back to front, but is extremely shallow, just 21 yards.

In between his matter-of-fact, perfectly placed shots Del was good for quite a few stories. Pointing out the thin, cylindrical bunker behind the sixth hole, Del said they call it the "hot dog bunker." During the renovation it was purposely given this shape to pay homage to the hot dog stand behind the green. And no doubt about it, these franks are fully deserving of their monument.

One of the pleasures of the course is its immaculate condition. Springy bermuda grass fairways seem to add 5-10 yards of distance to crisply played irons. Part of the secret behind the conditioning is that volunteers fill divots in exchange for golf credit time. May seem like a raw deal, but for golf addicts on a fixed income, it's tantamount to a $20 per hour job.

The Gold course's signature element is its par threes, which all play over ponds from elevated tees. The 16th, 169 yards from the back tees to an island green, is among Golf Magazine's 500 greatest holes in the world, and with good reason. This is golf's very first island green. Interestingly, the three tee boxes are isolated from each other on the hillside, creating tee shots from

BLOWN AWAY

By Ben Amato

The waters of the East End of our island create a unique environment, which few ever get to explore. Blown Away is one ship's voyage to the bays, beaches and harbors which make Long Island a vacationer's dream.

Weekly, the sailboat Orange Crush will travel to different East End locations, sampling the beauty, excitement and mystery that make Long Island a popular destination. Marinas, resorts and restaurants will be visited and reviewed. Fellow boaters will be interviewed for their knowledge of places to go, bays to anchor in and new ways to enjoy our marine environment. Marine biologists, environmentalists, historians, local baymen and fishermen will sail aboard, serving as guides into our shared waterside history. The Orange Crush will also serve as Dan's Papers flagship, where film, television and political celebrities can visit, enjoy our waters and be interviewed.

The Internet will also be used to chronicle this fifteen-week adventure. Video will be taken during each week's voyage and posted on Dan's Paper's website, so users can not just read about the ship's travels but also see the adventure on streaming video. An archive of digital photos and columns will be posted and serve as a waterside guide for others who wish to travel our course.

Every voyage of exploration begins long before the lines are cast off from the dock and this summer's adventure originated when there was snow on the ground. Dan and the editorial team at his paper marveled at the concept and Dan himself wished he had thought of it, back in his wandering days. Marinas were quick to offer help, transient dockage and a chance to see their side of East End hospitality. Every boater I spoke with had their own favorite restaurant, bay, beach and bar I just have to visit.

The first decision was what type of ship to get and that alone was an adventure filled with hidden danger. The first boat was an old Pearson that a local broker would "loan" me. That offer sank when I began to read the very small print on the contract and saw the long, thick ropes attached to that ship. Next came the Full Sea Foundation, a non-profit organization devoted to restoring and sailing vintage wooden ships Its founder David Kireuidjian offered me the stewardship of the Cadence, a thirty-five year old Olsen 36. This huge wooden Swedish ship was incredibly restored by the Clark family. Albert and Daria found her busted up on Shelter Island's rocky shore. It was declared a total loss by the owner's insurance company so the Clarks invested five years of love, carpentry talent and TLC to turn this vessel into a museum piece. But with the arrival of their second child, they could no longer put in the time and money Cadence needed to stay afloat. I could not make that committment either.

The third ship I found in a local marina. This Catalina 28 was landlocked since 1997, when its owner came down with MS and could no longer pull himself aboard his ship. The broker took ownership, through unpaid storage and dock fees, and wanted to "clear out" his yard. Money was put down, arrangements were made and then ship surveyor James Dias saved my life. Rotten bulkheads, loose keel bolts, an engine that just might shake its transmission loose and a leaking gas tank could have doomed the voyage before the main sail was raised. Lesson one learned. May the buyer beware.

Today I am the owner of Orange Crush, a 26 foot Pearson sailboat, vintage 1977. Fran Nilsen has captained this tight little ship to many first place finishes in races conducted by the Mt. Sinai Yacht Club. Now this bright orange hulled boat will carry me, any my readers, through an East End summer.

All voyages are dual in nature, covering both the territory you pass through and the changes it brings to your life. Blown Away is no exception. Rough weather has already taken a toll. This past week my mother suffered a large heart attack. Cardiologists, heart surgeons, two hospital intensive care units and countless prayers have marked the uncharted course I have been forced to travel. Today, these waters are calming down and the nautical side of my trip may begin. Lesson two learned. Life is what happens when you're busy making plans. That's a quote from John Lennon, which proves its validity even more.

Memorial Day approaches and Blown Away will begin its odyssey. No real itinerary has been set so it's wide open waters for a while. If you know of a special spot on the water or a unique harbor to visit, drop me an email at Bamato3742@cs.com. If you own a marina or some empty dock space and would like the Orange Crush to visit, call me at Dan's Papers, 573-0500, but leave a message. I hope to be on the ship. I will be around Greenport in mid-June, Montauk and Shelter Island during July, Peconic Bay in early August and then back towards Sag and Montauk Harbor at the summer's end. Meanwhile, look for Orange Crush on the North Fork these next two weeks. I have stay close to Stony Brook Hospital so Port Jefferson and Mattituck will be the first port-of-calls. Anchors away.

SEAN on Newtown Lane in East Hampton is in full swing with the season starting this week. The season gets hot at SEAN, with the new arrival of the perfect linen shirt. Crafted from the finest Italian linen, this shirt comes in a wide range of twelve colors – lavender (my personal favorite), gray, melon, crisp white, and robin's egg blue, just to name a few. At just $95, you will want to collect several colors for the summer. Stop in and say hi to the owner and manager Sean Cassidy, tell him I sent you!

Wow, Newtown Lane is popping with great shops. One of you favorites, Fishs Eddy, originally located in Southampton has just landed on Newtown Lane. There is some new exciting designer dishware as well. Fishs Eddy has recently collaborated with the fashion designer, Nicole Miller, for two new patterns. One of which is a baby pattern, which features beautiful retro babies around the rim of a small bowl and plate. They have done a wedding pattern, (called "I Do") perfect for all these Hampton weddings to name a few. There are lots of new items that you will love, too many to list, so get going, and enjoy the world of Fishs Eddy, and I do.

O.K, are you ready for this one? CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

CELEBRITY TRAFFIC

I've always imagined the Queens Midtown Tunnel as an hourglass turned on its side with each grain of sand a car struggling to work through the narrows. At least that's how it feels on the Memorial Day weekend, with every New Yorker fighting traffic of biblical proportions in their escape to the Hamptons.

Let's pretend all the chic Hamptonites drive vintage cars rather than their generic, pricey vehicles. What would the celebrities in that mix favor as their classic car of choice? Caught in traffic and squeezing his way into the tunnel from the Manhattan side is no other than Sean "P.Diddy" Combs. He's not driving, but he's in the back seat of a Duesenburg Dual Cowl Phaeton, surrounded by some very striking girls and guys. The Duesenburg was one of the largest, most powerful and most expensive vehicles produced during the '20s and '30s. It's definitely P. Diddy's kind of ride. A real "doozy". Oh, whatever you do, don't cut him off!

Finally inside the tunnel, who do we spot but Mel Brooks and Anne Bancroft. Mel's driving a 1936 Mercedes Benz 540K Supercharged Cabriolet. This is probably the most valuable of all the collector Mercedes. Thanks to Mel's hit broadway show The Producers, it's certainly springtime, or rather summertime for him and his wife. At the Queens side tollbooth there's Chevy Chase driving a '51 Ford Woodie station wagon. 1951 was the last year of the real wood station wagon. I guess Chevy likes the Ford 'cause it looks like the "family truckster" wagon that he drove in his "Vacation" film. Why isn't Chevy driving his namesake?

Traffic is heavy through Queens and Jerry Seinfeld is having a ball dicing his 1955 Porsche Speedster through traffic. Slicing left and right, from lane to lane, he moves with the speed of Kramer entering a room. Yikes, Jerry just cut-off P. Diddy's Duesenburg.

Out past exit 39, traffic is moving a little better, and who is side by side on the highway in separate cars, none other than Calvin Klein and Ralph Lauren. Calvin's driving a 1951 XK-120 Jaguar Coupe, just about the most elegant looking car built in the 'fifties. Ralph is in a 1963 Ferrari Lusso, considered by many (including myself) to be the most beautiful street-Ferrari ever designed. They are obviously racing one another, seem equally as fast, even though Ralph has the newer and faster steed. They are aggravating other drivers with their aggressive road manners, and one can only wonder which one of these men will have the "better" taste to back off with their high speed driving antics.

Past exit 60, things are looking good. Speaking of looking good, there's Christie Brinkley, her hair blowing in the wind from the cockpit of a little 1954 Austin Healy 100-4. The windshield's folded flat, (the only production car in the world ever to have this unique feature) with the little four cylinder engine singing its sing. Christie certainly knows her vintage cars. Finally at exit 70, all the traffic seems to exit to the right, and everyone sneers at the poor souls that are heading to Riverhead.

Katie Couric whips around traffic, and blips the throttle of her 1962 Alfa Romeo Gulia Spyder. She downshifts into third, and all one sees and hears is a roar and a red flash of Italian metal. She raises a fist into the breeze and lets out a loud whoop. Katie gets a little wild when she can sleep late and then head to the Hamptons.

Traffic is light, everyone breathes a sigh of relief at the entrance to the Sunrise Highway. Kurt Vonnegut seems relaxed in his 1936 Bentley Sports Sedan. Robert DeNiro's blasting the radio in his 1959 Caddy Eldorado convertible, and Susan Lucci is dreaming up another daytime plot in her British racing green 1961 Jaguar XK-E roadster.

Flying past the Westhampton Beach exit in his wooden bodied Rolls Royce Shooting Brake, (circa 1932) Billy Joel is loudly singing "New York State of Mind". Coincidentally, he passes Paul McCartney in an Aston-Martin DB-4, and waves, as Paul joins him in song. The sunrise serenade. It's a parade of stars. Peter Jennings in his '55 Ford Thunderbird is taking it all in, and wishes he had a camera crew with him.

Then it's deja vu all over again (shades of the entrance to the Queens Midtown Tunnel) as traffic comes to a screeching halt as the Sunrise Highway turns into a two lane road. Steven Spielberg slams on the brakes of his 1936 Cord 810, and Kate Capshaw spills her Evian. No cup holders in 1936.

Parked on the side of the road is Dan Rattiner and his 1953 Triumph TR-3. His car always overheats in traffic, and he's standing in front of the raised hood, fanning the steaming engine with his white hat. (So that's why he wears that hat!) Dick Cavett pulls over in his 1934 Type 57C Bugatti and offers him a hand. Dan waves him on, saying he'd rather ride with Kim Bassinger who is doing her good samaritan bit and picking him up in her 1955 Mercedes-Benz Gullwing. ('Way to go, Dan.)

Traffic is moving slowly through Water Mill. Slow and fast, stop and go. Slow and steady wins this race. Relax, you'll get there. Then it happens, Martha Stewart's 1964 Austin Mini Cooper rear-ends P.Diddy's Duesenburg.

Arrive In Style: Hire A Limo

Westhampton Beach's own limo company, Beach Limousines, announced their recent acquisition of one of the East End's other major limo services, Hampton Hills Limousine.

According to company president, Daniel Vogeney, the joining of these two carriers will result in one superior limousine company which will give impeccable service to passengers requiring transportation to and from Montauk Point, Manhattan, and any place in the Tri-State area. Loin Butler, Vice President of the newly merged company states, "Many people think a limo service is only for local runs around town in stretch limousines, but it just isn't so. We have clients who book their whole itinerary nationwide through us, so we will arrange not only their local ground transportation but be sure a limo or town car is waiting for them when they arrive at their destination as well".

"Our East End clients demand top notch care", Dan said, "and they deserve it." The company boasts trained professional chauffeurs, clean, safe and stylish vehicles, and amenities in their fleet of Lincoln Towncars, stretch limousines and specialty vehicles. "It's the little extras we provide that have made Beach Limousines so successful, and now that we have acquired Hampton Hills Limousine, we can better serve our East End clientele."

"There's a lot going on out here on the east end," Dan said. "Many New York City companies have subsidiary offices in Suffolk County, and with the growth of business on the internet, many executives work at least part time from their East End residences. Our limo and town car service affords them the ability to travel back and forth and work at the same time. What did we ever do before cell phones!"

"There are always the weddings, the funerals, the proms," Loin added, "and there is nothing more rewarding than sharing in the festivities of a beautiful bride....but, when all is said and done, I guess most of our work is for the individual who just has to get from point "A" to point "B" on a schedule, for a meeting or perhaps to catch a plane. East End business is constantly growing, and we are pleased to grow right along with it."

If you are intersted in the quality services of Beach Limousines, call (631) 288-7777.

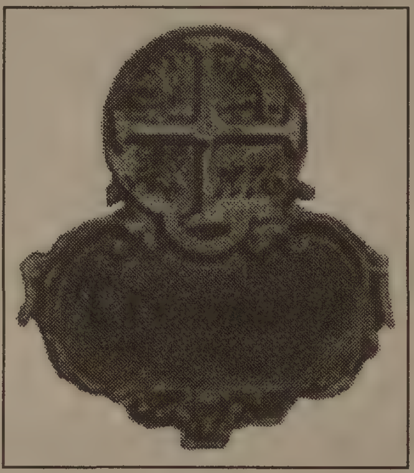
Treasure On The Net

Research firms tabulating online statistics estimate the number of U.S. Internet users will exceed 170 million by the year 2002. That number represents massive buying power. Currently, banner advertisements are the only way to reach them, however. With 170 million shoppers online, millions of web sites to visit and no effective way of bringing the two together than chance, how do you attract people to your site? The solution is to promote your company through an innovative, fun, cost-effective online trivia game that keeps visitors coming back again and again.



Treasure on the Net is a marketing company that educates communities of people about great companies through an online Treasure Hunt game. These companies pay for this education, and a portion of the proceeds are donated to non-profit organizations that promote Treasure on the Net to their membership base. In addition, Treasure on the Net has partnered with the National Union of American Families, whose vision is to have a computer in every home, by using a portion of the proceeds to help children and low-income families access to the Internet and the educational opportunities available on the Internet.

With Treasure on the Net, visitors play a game in which they collect points for correctly answering a series of questions. In order to correctly answer the questions, players must visit the web sites of all the participating game sponsors, because that's where the answers are found. As a result, game sponsors pay for only those hits they receive. It's advertising with a rifle rather than a shotgun.

Treasure on the Net at once awards players for finding the correct answer and guarantees a steady flow of traffic to the web sites of participating game sponsors. Yet, another layer to the game is the reward system for players who introduce Treasure on the Net to others, thereby recruiting additional players. Players are encouraged to (and rewarded for) signing up friends and acquaintances. This word-of-mouth promotion serves as an obvious benefit to players and, more importantly, game sponsors. By participating as a game sponsor, the company will receive the benefit of targeted web it visits, and the money the company pays for this marketing will go to both charities and to the empowerment and education of children and families all across America through the National Union of American Families.

If you are a nonprofit organization, Treasure on the Net can be a great opportunity for you to earn money through simple promotion. If you would like more information, please e-mail org@treasureonthenet.com.

If you're a company who is interested in educating communities of people about yourself, please e-mail sales@treasureonthenet.com

Treasure on the Net, the revolutionary, cooperative method of increasing the effectiveness of online advertising, will be the benchmark for the future. Soon shoppers and advertisers alike will quickly realize there is indeed "treasure on the net."

Treasure on the net was founded in 2000 by David A. Mitts. David has had over 14 years experience in business administration, marketing, and corporate management.

After a fascinating and charming day on the links with a local legend, I parted company with Del Snyder. He yawned his way to a 74. And I struggled mightily just to get to 104.

The accommodations at Colonial Williamsburg are tasteful, quiet and comfortable. I stayed at Providence Hall, a bit of a dormitory setting from the outside but meticulously old South inside. The traditional guest room was richly decorated in tones of cranberry and mahogany with gilt-framed mirrors and bucolic prints. A single rose on the vanity added an appropriate note of understatement to a quietly luxurious room. Even the TV guide was bound. Weekend guests, particularly Democrats, will enjoy opening their door on Sunday morning to a copy of the Washington Post.

Playing both courses at the Golden Horseshoe is a must. Through the tree-lined Gold course you can occasionally steal a glance at the more thickly forested Green course, designed by Rees Jones and now entering its tenth year.

Though the Green has the reputation of being the easier of the two, it is also longer by some 300 yards from the tips, reaching 7120 yards. The principal difference between the two courses is what happens to slightly off-target shots. On the Gold, the fairways are crowned, exposing clumsy drivers, while on the Green, mounding brings slightly errant shots back to favorable lies. Putts on the Green route their way to the hole with much less resistance than on the Gold course, where barely perceptible breaks are the rule.

While the Gold mostly follows the lay of the land, the Green has been engineered with both a linksy and hilly quality. On the par 4 2nd, for example, the earth seems to tumble over itself for about 200 yards before allowing for a flat lie in the fairway.

A similar topography torments approach shots on the No. 1 handicap par-4 sixth. The last 120 yards short of the green dip down into a small valley with the land buckling as though some unholy subterranean force was bursting to escape. Jean-Claude Killy would break his neck trying to zigzag through these moguls.

On the day I played I found the sand traps to be unduly penal. A greenskeeper later explained that the NCAA Regional Championships were to be held on the Green two weeks hence. "The kids, they don't wanna look at the sand as an inconvenience, they want walls." Great. I had to play out sideways at least twice.

But then there is this other, more favorable breed of wall at work at the Golden Horseshoe. Del swears that the trees throughout the complex always return shots back into play. And after two rounds at the resort I'm impressed enough to believe that all those donations to the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation are really being steered toward the development of a new, super-secret botanical hybrid: the ball-friendly tree.

The two par threes on the front play over ravines, but shots falling a bit short are rescued by catch terraces. Meanwhile the par threes on the Gold course are almost too much of a good thing, as they all play spectacularly downhill over water from elevated perches, but lack variety.

Each course has a 600 yard-plus par 5. On the Green course it's the 15th, where you have to hit your drive on the screws to simply gain the fairway. This dogleg right, which quickly slips off into woods just off the right side, requires three hefty shots to get home.

Similarly muscular is the 220-yard 17th. With a large jigsaw-puzzle fragment of a bunker catching anything hit between 140-200 yards, this is a backbreaking par 3.

If you have played the Green course before, you know that every shot is merely a prelude to the drive at the epic 18th hole. 203 yards through the air your ball must travel or quoth the ravine, "Nevermore." At the bottom is a scenic pond, backed by a sixty foot bank of sloping vegetation. With no drop area afforded, this hole can blow your score to smithereens. Clear the bank and it is gradually, but steadily uphill to an amphitheater green with the safety of the clubhouse just beyond.

fashion products, including apparel, accessories, eyewear, watches, fragrances and home furnishings under a range of lifestyle brand names. So while you're strolling on Newtown Lane, you must stop in and and welcome the Armani Group.

Another new shop on Newtown Lane, home of high fashion women's and men's golfwear and accessories that can be worn on and off the golf course, is The Nines. The line includes Bogner golfwear, Bobby Jones, Como, LaCoste, Hype Golf, Postcards, J. Lindeberg, Tommy Bahama and Bernard Zins. The Nines is also introducing a new line of cotton and stretch fashion-forward clothing by a female golfer called Woo Gear. For the men, (think Father's Day) most of the above and introducing a new line by Johnny Walker. The newest line this season is Burberry Golf for men and women, as well as accessories, also, Burberry Plaid in golf bags visors and caps. Wow! Look for an upscale line of golf shoes, including high fashion shoes by Walter Genuin and the new line of Bally, Aerogreen and Tags. I could go on and on and on, but I can't! You have to see The Nines "where style is its own game", to believe what they have.

Starfish in the Amagansett Square is having their "Super Memorial Day Weekend Blowout Sale". I walked into this shop and the first thing that caught my eye were chiffon skirts ($15), I bought one in every color… generous cut, 100% cotton tees, ($15), funky summer handbags ($5), and summer print dresses ($25). You walk out with shopping bags full in this shop, trust me…

Hot off the press and off the beaten path for me, is Pendleton at the Bellport Outlet's Memorial Day "Sidewalk Sale" Friday through Monday. There are select items from $10 to $20 and select groups reduced %25% to 70% off already low prices. Check it out.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Memorial Day Shopping!

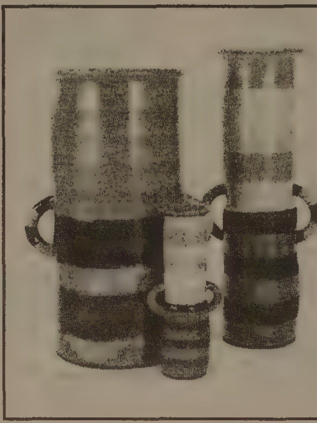
ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"IN BLOOM" AT LIZAN TOPS GALLERY

The budding spring season brings forth many things that signal renewal — and this observation holds true with the start of the Hamptons' exhibition scene as well. Many galleries begin their own "season" with the idea of starting fresh, with nature and its bounties providing a metaphor.

The current show at East Hampton's Lizan Tops is no exception, its initial seasonal exhibit always appropriately devoted to things "In Bloom." However, this year's subject matter and style seem to deviate from the expected: from pretty pictures of flowers to images with bite. Subtle as they may appear to be at first glance, these pieces evoke interest and even a smile. The reason lies in the idea of personification.



"Vessels" by Diane Mayo

Diane Mayo's "pots" (as she calls them) is a good example, her vertical vessels resembling a person standing with his/her arms on the hips, an akimbo stance that lends "attitude" (the handles serve as arms). The shape and length of each piece also recall a family: the slim "mother"; broad "father"; and little "child." Ms. Mayo's inanimate objects are given animation in a way quite unlike her previous pieces adorned with birds. In those cases, a charming narrativity was added to the mix.

James Guppy's surreal canvases delineate personification, too, but the result is one of mystery — even foreboding. This critic is reminded of tales by Swift (which Mr. Guppy acknowledges) and the TV cult series, The Prisoner, particularly when images show a man adrift on the sea. (We know the TV hero was always trying to escape to the ocean.)

It's the sea, flowers and often man which all struggle for survival in Mr. Guppy's work At times, such conflict pits objects against each other; conversely, the "actors" (objects) must work with each other to endure.

Finally, Rex Lau's works embody a personality, too. His single trees are articulated in ways that his past series was not: each tree recalls a human figure, full of spirit with a tale to tell. In this way, they resemble Dan Rizzie's plants, flowers and bulbs where images possess human traits, laughing and dancing to welcome the new season.

The show will be on view until May 29.

HONORING THE COVER ARTIST: DANIEL POLLERA

Art in America is usually found in special exhibition spaces, yet there are exceptions. For example, you might see paintings on restaurant walls or at chic boutiques. But in a helliport? Not likely, unless you happen to use the one in New York at Thirtyfourth Street. That's where prints by Daniel Pollera have a home, welcoming travelers far and wide with their coastal views and indigenous settings.

This week's cover, "Morning Sail," is a good example of such works, evoking a local scene (here it's New England), complete with distant sailboats on a hazy, early morning. According to the artist, this piece (from a limited edition print series) is particularly close to his heart. "I've lived on the water in Baldwin Harbor since 1988," he says with obvious glee. "And when I was younger, I used to run fishing charters, going out one hundred miles. It was crazy rough. I don't have the desire to do it now; you have to be a real salty guy to do that."

While Mr. Pollera doesn't always create coastal views, water still exerts an impact. His "Still Life with Seashells" features an old weathered hutch, seen in the late afternoon, surrounded by a woman's hat, drift wood, and seashells. There's a narrative at play here, the image evoking a sense of story, character (literally and figuratively) and texture.

Speaking about the sea and the stories it may tell, Mr. Pollera launches into a spirited discussion on The Perfect Storm, a movie he obviously admired. "I have fisherman friends like that. That's the kind of experience that inspires you to paint."

Mr. Pollera is an artist who is also seriously involved in the production of his prints. It's a discerning kind of job as he describes the process: "I go into New York to see the press proofs, to do corrections as I compare the original to the proof. I have to be able to pick out the finer points for corrections, to find out what needs to be added or subtracted."

Mr. Pollera is involved in marketing as well. "I have limited editions which give you credibility," he explains. "I also have a poster market which doesn't

The Mummy Returns

DUST TO DUST MORE DESERT FOR DESSERT

The Mummy Returns for his date with destiny! What's with destiny? I remember dates with pits. Years ago when dates, that strange fruit of the desert palm, enjoyed an exotic popularity... then they got fancy! They sold them pitless and jacked up the price. My sainted, frugal French Maman would search out the whole date. It wasn't just the fruit... she had taste. It was good to bite into the good, solid sweet and then, encounter that weird, odd, misshapen hardcore pit.

Destiny... schmesstiny! This recent Mummy-go-around is like the juicy, oasis fruit but, they've removed the eerie center that gives it life and unsettling strangeness. In its stead, they've given it expensive packaging. It's not the pits but, it sure ain't the lively 1932, dead-of-night, MUMMY that had me huddling-up to my Mom every time we saw it. My Mummy's return to the same shop for the classic date was the right thing to do... as was, enjoying a good juicy fright.

MORTIFIED EGYPTIAN VIDEO GAME

A sequel to the 1999 Mummy, it keeps the original cast and unoriginal mannerisms. It is easy for critics to kick sand into the face of the new Mummy, but, I gotta' tell ya', this Mummy's Return is built like a brick pyramid, tons of incredible effects and many of them excellently inventive! Tut-tut, embalmy, you say? Of course, it steals from every corpse and loots every major studio's tombs. It robs the graves dug so neatly by George Lucas and his starry wars, Steven Speilberg's ridingbritched, explorer exploits, Gladiator combat, Crouching Tiger girlie sword play, E.T. floatation escapes past the Moon and even, Home Alone antics. The handsome Egyptologist couple, Brendan Fraser and Rachel Weisz, have had a son, 8 year old Freddie Boath to create more trouble and fun for his mom's brother/barfly fop, John Hannah. They are all well equipped to raid the crypts of all the gag lines, hair-on-end scares, impossible escapes and fast-paced -action-packed thrills to shoot them up to the top of the computerized box office ratings. The 3,000 year Mummy, Imhotep, played (when he's fleshed-out) with a lot of flesh and a Mr. Clean bald head, heavily sun-tanned Arnold Vosloo. When the Mummy's not fleshed out, he's a gluggy mess... the latest CGI technology. We expect more. After all, he's 1,000 years older than Mel Brook's 2,000 Year Old Man.

BILE ON THE NILE

The time is 1933 in this incarnation but, harks back to Thebes in 3067 B.C. when the Scorpion King, portrayed by The Rock, on Sabbatical from the wrestling ring. He gets a God to give him and his horde top military powers... but things get screwed up and he's left in death-limbo like old, falling-apartImhotep. They are both just waiting for the right circumstances to make a comeback.

You know, those cursed curses: Don't open this tomb! Don't look in this chest! Don't put on this bracelet! So, wouldn't you know the brave archaeologists do all those things, jeopardizing not only their lives but, their mansions, the British Museum and the world and the under-world and independent film making as we know and love it. But, this stuff.., it's way over my head, like quicksand. It's all cuniform or hieroglyphics to me. I suppose you have to be an 8 year old, like their son, to understand it.

diminish credibility if it's done well. Publishing puts you in an arena, puts you in a lot of galleries. I consider myself very fortunate that people respond to my images."

Dan's Papers

"They Made The Movie Here" Film Festival 2001

Interiors

A VERY SERIOUS WOODY ALLEN FILM WHEREIN HIS CHARACTERS LIVE DARKLY THROUGH GLASS

Dan's Papers' "They Made The Movie Here" Festival carries on boldly with Woody Allen's Interiors (1978), his serious turn-around film that is nothing to laugh at.

Woody Allen's movies are a matter of taste and most people find them as delicious as delicatessen, but contrarily, I usually find them too delectable. What's not to like? Mr. Allen, agrees with us that our good old towns are dandily suited as movie locations and he has used them a lot. Interiors, his definitely serious, no kidding around, unhappy drama is well crafted and, craftily, he uses a marvelous old Southampton House and its beaches effectively to give support to the as-usual wonderful performances of Geraldine Page and the late, E.G. Marshall, who remains indestructible.

I'm sorry, but I cannot write about Woody Allen in a completely straight manner. I keep giggling. So, funnily, let's say that we also agree on the cinematic gustability of Deli food. His favorite location for Deli was the Carnegie. However, I owed my allegiance to the lovable Max Asnas' Stage. But, more Deli later.

When people get to kibitzing about Woody's movies, comments are as contrasted as the theatrical masks of Comedy and Tragedy, both of which look just like Woody. And, there is truth there for though his most popular films reflect his personal scaredy-cat form of angst, bounced along as a series of one line funnies, frequently he melds comedy and drama with slathered slabs of nostalgia, layering them like a pastrami, turkey and salami special, and they are goo-ood! Also with Interiors, his first not-a-laughing-matter film, he can put on the deathly white mask of psychoses-as-tragedy-drama as created by Ingmar Bergman, and produce an anguished portrait of one man's family, frustrated by an ambitious and controlling mother.

Writing and directing as well as he does, he can easily open a Bergmanesque Swedish recipe case book of Freudian food for thought and make quite a toothsome and arresting Anjovissmorgasar med agg och graslok served with grief and hate and a half-sour pickle on the side. But, seriously folks . . .

Interiors was an important step for the writer/director. A pure drama foundation for the mixed-emotions movies to come. It succeeds well in keeping a straight line narrative in spite of a number of choppy scenes. I sense the knowledgeable, strong hands here of the film editor, Ralph Rosenblum. The scenes are strung together methodically so you know where the film is going and pretty much what will occur when you get there. That was not necessarily a back-handed compliment. Life can be predictable. It's a talky affair, but there is interest conversationally and it has plenty of good performances as it looks into the interiors of the houses and their inhabitants. The interest, of course, is that the houses are too tidy and the inhabitants very messed up,

The prime mover of the plot and furniture and tchotchkis is the mother so expressively played by Ms. Page. She is a successful interior decorator who meticulously creates and maintains beautiful "lives" for her husband and three grown daughters. Now they all feel as if they should make their own beds and lives. You know from the start that this is a serious film because there is no music and there are many shots of shiny, misty spare rooms, and isolated characters gaze darkly through a lot of glass. As the father stares out of a window, he relates . . . "but, suddenly,one day out of nowhere an enormous abyss opened up beneath our feet . . ." Please don't be put off by this overly portentous line. It is said by the always believable E.G. Marshall. Oh, gosh, I miss him.

Others in the cast are also so good! Diane Keaton is their daughter, a poet who can no longer write. She describes herself as being "impotent." Unfortunately, her husband catches it from her. But, he can still tug at the skirts of her actress sister, prettily done by Kristen Griffith. She does anything to get a decent part. Marybeth Hurt is the totally lost one who can't find a way to please her mother, her husband or herself. Maureen Stapleton, another cornerstone of the acting profession, is the earthy woman the father might find warmth with. Finally, the really terrible thing is that the mother has been teetering on the edge of an abyss more horrific than they can imagine.

My problem is with Mr. Allen's script. It is loaded with psychiatric footnotes and symbols. Everyone's problems are explicitly stated by themselves and others, and so are the possible cures. On the other hand, Ingmar Bergman has all this conveyed and implied by story, action and performance. Therefore, the play's the thing

Ask Dr. Dina

"My teenage son's friend has been staying over at our house a lot lately. We suspect that his parents have kicked him out, and he has no place to go. We don't want to reject him, but we really can't cope with raising another teenager. Where can we get real help for him?"

You're right to be hesitant to put yourselves in the middle of a situation like this. When we see a teenager at odds with his family, we think, "there but for the grace of God go I"—and deciding what to do can be very confusing.

On the one hand, we don't want to betray a boy or girl who may have a genuine need for shelter from an abusive home life. On the other hand, we don't want to aid and encourage a troubled teen who's avoiding facing up to problems of his or her own devising. And very few friends or neighbors will take kindly to us "butting in" to their family problems.

You may want to try having a heart-to-heart talk with your son about his friend's situation. You'll want to start out by saying you want to help, and that you're not going to judge or take sides. It's never easy to remain objective, of course. The way to do it is to be prepared with concrete suggestions for where the boy can find immediate, real help.

Does your son's friend have an adult in his life that he trusts, and who has influence with his parents? If not (and it's not likely, or he wouldn't be sleeping in your house), then you might want to have a helping agency in mind for him to turn to. A family priest, minister or rabbi is a good place to start—or a local social service agency. There are many places in the community that offer guidance and help.

At Family and Children's Association, for example, we offer everything from family mediation for families that want to get back together, to long-term housing solutions for kids who can never go home. And we have many solutions in between, including counseling and help for families in trouble because of finances, alcohol, drugs, violence, mental illness, and a host of other troubles. Family and Children's/Podell Haven in East Hampton, for example, specializes in helping with this kind of problem. You can even call ahead of time to talk this through—and for more detailed advice about how to proceed.

Don't delay though—act now, today, to get this boy the help he needs.

HAMPTONS NIGHTLIFE WITH CHRISTINE CARROLL

Well here it is, the weekend everyone's been waiting for. Memorial Day is the official start to the Hampton's summer party. There is so much going on I don't know where to begin, check out everything. Lots of places that were closed for the winter are now opening, including Jet East. Also lots of places who stuck with us through the long cold winter have new hours. NV will have a disco party every Friday thanks to you all loving the winter parties so much. On a different subject I can't forget about my brother Matthew, he and Michael Hughes showed the world that they are the most incredible, skilled pilots in the sky and we are so proud of you both. I love you.

Take Five 2001

with Jan Silver

It's good to be back on my Dan's Papers' beat writing about the performing arts and special events on the East End of Long Island. The cultural centers here have been working all winter to provide a wide selection of first-class entertainment for the next six months. The headliners this Memorial Day Weekend: Lorna Luft on Saturday night at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center singing some of her mother's (Judy Garland) favorite songs, followed on Sunday night by popular singer/songwriter Don McLean ("American Pie," "And I Love You So," "Castles in the Air," etc.); Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre opens its summer season with the recent Off Broadway hit Jar the Floor; and Montauk Theatre Productions brings in the Manhattan cabaret show, Lovely Ladies Singing Nasty Little Songs, on Saturday and Sunday.

There is a Memorial Day Parade on Monday in East Hampton. It starts at Guild Hall, 10:30 a.m., and heads down Main Street to Newtown Lane. Other interesting things to see and do this weekend: there's a special showing of Julian Schnabel's interesting biopic about a young artist Basquiat at East Hampton's Ross School on Saturday at 2 p.m. (no charge but call 631-537-0500 to reserve a seat), and Southampton's Parrish Art Museum just opened its fourth invitational landscape exhibit, "Follies: Fantasy in the Landscape."

There are also several benefits and special events this weekend including the Potatohampton 10K minithon in Sagaponack (open to all runners) for the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, the Hampton Auto Classic car show (benefiting both the American Cancer Society and the Bridge Hampton Historical Society), and a cocktail party/art auction at the home of artists April Gornick and Eric Fischl for Planned Parenthood. For details on all of the above, read on:

THEATER

Bay Street Theatre in Sag Harbor starts off its summer season with the recent Off Broadway hit, Cheryl West's Jar the Floor. This is a touching comedy/drama about four generations of African-American women at their matriarch's 90th birthday party Tickets are available at the theater box office or by calling (631) 725-9500.

Montauk Theatre Productions presents the cabaret revue, Lovely Ladies Singing Nasty Little Songs, starring Barry Cummings, Anita Brown and Woody Regan (plus some surprise guests). This new show just debuted at Don't Tell Mama and Shooting Star Theatre in Manhattan. It plays Saturday and Sunday evenings, 8 p.m., at the MTP Studio just off Montauk Highway. For tickets, call (631) 668-5656.

MUSIC

The Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center brings in Lorna Luft with "A Celebration of the Music of Judy Garland: Songs My Mother Taught Me" on Saturday at 8:30 p.m. This is a multi-media show using film and video clips of Ms. Garland with song and commentary by Ms. Luft and an orchestra (tickets $40-$75). On Sunday at 8:30 p.m., well-known singer/songwriter Don McLean leads his band through 30 years of his popular hits and favorite songs (tickets $30-$60). To reserve seats to either show, call the WHBPAC box office from noon to 5 p.m. at (631) 288-1500.

The Stephen Talkhouse, a funky/cozy music club on Amagansett's Main St. (Montauk Highway), has diverse performers scheduled this weekend: Dick Dale at 8 p.m. followed by Nancy Atlas on Friday (May 25); Little Feat at 8 p.m. on Saturday; Dave Mason at 8 p.m. on Sunday. Seating is limited, so call the Talkhouse at (631) 267-3117 for tickets. Other favorite spots for mellow listening or dancing: Hunky Page on piano at the American Hotel (Sag Harbor); Dennis Raffelock Trio at Bridges (Bridgehampton), Todd Michaels (Sat.) and Diana Rogers (Sun. aft.) at the Maidstone Arms piano (East Hampton), Stefanie Cardinali and Paul Gene on Fri. at Oyster Pond (Montauk) and Sun. at World Pie (Bridgehampton); Lonesharks at the Wild Rose Cafe (Bridgehampton).

SPEAKERS

Two of our local, independent book stores have interesting guest speakers this weekend. Jay Mulvaney, author of Jackie: The Clothes of Camelot, will have a slide show and discussion upstairs at Book Hampton, East Hampton, on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. The book coincides with the current and acclaimed show at the Metropolitan Museum's Costume Institute.

Canio's Books, Upper Main St., Sag Harbor hosts "retired" television actress (youngest daughter Dagmar in 1950s TV classic "I Remember Mama" starring Peggy Wood) and feminist author Robin Morgan. Her memoir Saturday's Child has just been published and she will talk about her childhood on Saturday at 6 p.m. There is no admission charge for either program, but come a little early to get a seat.

BENEFITS AND SPECIAL EVENTS

The Hampton Auto Classic is an exhibition and auction going on all weekend under a tent at Sayre Park off Snake Hollow Road in Bridgehampton. It begins on Friday with a preview showing ($10 admission) followed by a cocktail party ($25 donation) to benefit the Bridge Hampton Historical Society's vintage car road rallye planned for the fall. The auction is on Saturday ($15 admission), and the weekend concludes with a Sunday luncheon and fashion show called "Concours d'Elegance," chaired by Christie Brinkley and Peter Cook for the American Cancer Society ($250 donation to the ACS; call 631-287-6277). General admission on Sunday is $20. The Kensington Motor Group is conducting the auction.

The opening gun for the umpteenth annual Dan's Papers Potatohampton 10K Minithon goes off, rain or shine, at 9:30 a.m. on Saturday, May 26. Everyone is welcome to participate. The race starts at the Bridgehampton Presbyterian Church and runs through the potato fields of Sagaponack (next town east!). Registration opens at 7:30 a.m. Saturday morning at the church. All proceeds benefit the National Multiple Sclerosis Society. For more information, call (631) 329-5480.

The local chapter of Planned Parenthood always gets a talented celebrity to open their home for the cause. This year it is a duo. Artists April Gornik and Eric Fischl volunteer their North Haven home for a cocktail party and art auction on Saturday starting at 5:30 p.m. Tickets are $175 and can be reserved by calling (631) 361-7526 ext. 235.

The debut of Dan's Papers' new magazine, southofthehighway, will be celebrated at London Jewelers, Main Street, East Hampton, on Saturday from 7 to 9 p.m. with a cocktail party and runway show of Betsey Johnson fashions. Admission is a $25 donation to the Child Development Center of the Hamptons. London Jewelers is also celebrating its 75th anniversary. For reservations, call Sande or Maureen at (516) 627-0669.

...not the message. It's the people we care about, not their problems. Interiors doesn't resonate strongly enough for everyone. It remains best in the memory only as a slice of life and a rather thin one at that. I'll take the thick sliced, three-tiered sandwich special style named for Woody Allen, the wacky and wonderful American original.

I am hoping that Ms. Maryann Caristo will be able to take the time off from her busy Real Estate sales in Southampton to be with us. She lived in the Interiors house as a girl and young woman. silvia lehrer's cooking column

It's time for backyard chefs to roll out the barbecue grill. Memorial Day Weekend is here.

Through the years I have enjoyed all manner of grilled food. I've had a love affair with fish and vegetables on the grill for more than 25 years, as I have joyously written about in my cookbook, cooking columns and have documented in my cooking classes. There is a time and place, as most carnivores agree, to boast about a fine steak on the grill. As for which cut is best, you might consider a porterhouse, a shell or a sirloin. Most would agree with me here. I am not much of a beef eater and while cuts such as hangar, skirt or flank steak may suggest the ordinary, they are cuts that I particularly enjoy.

Flank steak on the grill has many virtues. The meat takes well to marinating, it has a juicy tenderness when properly sliced and has little fat. Since the ends of a flank steak are thinner than at the center, guests have their choice of doneness. It cooks quickly and has a wonderful, beefy taste. It is also a less expensive cut and is equally good served hot, warm or at room temperature.

To cook a flank steak properly, lay the steak flat on an oiled grill rack or under a broiler and grill or broil for 5-7 minutes per side. When you think it is done, press your thumb into the center of the meat. It should be springy to the touch when medium rare. After the steak is cooked, let it sit for about five minutes so that juices can redistribute through the meat. Cut the meat across the grain before serving. Wishing you wonderful tastes this holiday weekend.

FLANK STEAK WITH TERIYAKI MARINADE

Serves 4

3-4 garlic cloves cut into lengthwise slivers
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons tamari or soy sauce
1 teaspoon honey
3 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil

1. Trim the steak of any excess fat or have the butcher do it for you. With a sharp paring knife, held at a 45 degree angle, make tiny slits in rows on both sides of the steak, about 1 1/2 inches apart. Slide a garlic sliver into each slit on both sides and put the steak in a shallow non-reactive dish such as Pyrex.

2. Place lemon juice in a small bowl and whisk in the lemon juice, soy and honey. Add the oil in a slow steady stream, whisking the marinade until it is emulsified. Pour the marinade over the steak, turning the steak to coat it well. Refrigerate, covered for 4-6 hours, turning the steak occasionally and basting with the marinade.

3. When ready to grill, remove the steak from the refrigerator and bring to room temperature. Meanwhile build a hot fire in your grill until coals are ashen hot or preheat a gas grill. Remove the steak from the marinade, reserving the marinade for basting. Grill the steak on an oiled rack, basting it occasionally, for 6-7 minutes on each side for medium rare or until springy to the touch. Transfer the steak to a platter and let stand about 5 minutes before slicing. With a sharp knife held at a 45 degree angle cut thin slices across the grain. Serve at once.

FLANK STEAK WITH A MARINADE SPICE

Serves 4

1 2-pound flank steak
3-4 garlic cloves cut into lengthwise slivers
1 teaspoon dried thyme
1 teaspoon brown sugar
1/2 teaspoon dried hot pepper flakes
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Pinch ground cloves
Olive oil to coat the steak

1. With a sharp paring knife, held at a 45-degree angle, make tiny slits in rows on both sides of the steak, about 1 1/2 inches apart. Slide a garlic sliver into each slit on both sides and put the steak in a shallow dish large enough to hold it.

2. In a small bowl combine the remaining ingredients and rub the mixture into both sides of the steak. Rub the steak with a coating of olive oil and refrigerate, covered for 4-6 hours. When ready to cook, remove steak from the refrigerator and bring to room temperature.

3. Meanwhile build a hot fire in your grill until coals are ashen hot or preheat a gas grill. Grill the steak on an oiled rack for about 5 – 6 minutes on each side for medium rare, or until the meat is springy to the touch. Transfer the steak to a platter and let stand for about 5 minutes before slicing. With a sharp knife held at a 45-degree angle cut thin slices across the grain. Serve at once.

GRILLED ONIONS WITH GUACAMOLE SALSA

A sweet, spicy accompaniment for your grilled meats.
Serves 4-6

For the guacamole
2 avocados
2 teaspoons lime juice
2-3 scallions, white and light green part, thinly sliced
1 large tomato, diced
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/4 teaspoon cumin
1 jalapeno, seeded and finely diced
2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
Coarse (kosher) salt and finely ground pepper

For the onions
2 Vidalia onions
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
Coarse (kosher) salt to taste
1/2 teaspoon coarsely ground black pepper

1. Peel, seed and half avocados. Scoop out the flesh and cut into 1/2-inch dice. Put in a bowl and sprinkle over lime juice. Add the scallion, tomato, garlic, jalapeno and cilantro and toss to mix. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Can be prepared ahead. Refrigerate, covered in a suitable container. Bring to room temperature before serving.

2. Slice onions to about 1/4-inch thick and put into a non-reactive glass or shallow dish.

3. In a small bowl whisk the vinegar, oil, salt and pepper and pour over the onions Marinate for about 1 hour. Lift from the marinade and toss on the grill, basting occasionally, while grilling a steak, about 3 minutes on each side. Mound the prepared guacomole on a platter and surround with rings of grilled onions. Serve with steak slices fresh from the grill.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

East Hampton Point

295 Three Mile Harbor Road
631-329-2800

There are many restaurants on Long Island with water views but as soon as you drive into this complex which houses an extensive marina and luxury cottages as well as the restaurant and then move inside the restaurant, you know immediately that this is going to be something special.

As you enter the main bar area, center stage is taken by a beautiful 5.5 metre Olympic class sloop which was raced in the Olympic Games in Copenhagen. BJ. Callaway who is a co-manager of the restaurant and responsible for wine and beverage management, general staffing and front of the house activities explained that the original owners of the restaurant, quite literally, had the building erected around the boat. BJ has been at East Hampton Point for nine seasons as has his colleague and co-manager, Caroline Scarpinato, who organizes all the special events, such as weddings and also acts as the Maitre D' at weekends. Caroline has also been there for nine seasons after graduating in Hotel Management and subsequently studying and working in Switzerland.

BJ mixes a wide range of special drinks and is particularly proud of his margaritas which include his signature touch of cranberry. Look out though for his tip for this year's likely favorite, Sour Apple Martini made with half vodka and half sour apple mix.

The main dining area is carefully designed so that virtually every table has a view over the beautiful setting on Three Mile Harbor and as you sit there with a pre-dinner drink and read the menu with its promises of delights to come, it may be the nearest you can come to being on a luxury cruise liner without actually leaving shore.

Matthew Ross is the Executive Chef and this will be his second season here. Talking with him you really feel his enthusiasm for his demanding role. On a busy weekend, the restaurant and adjoining casual dining area will most likely serve around 700 meals from their two kitchens. Matthew came here from cooking in Nantucket and Florida and claims that his love of cooking comes from his grandfather. He specializes in food with a French Mediterranean flair and loves to cook seafood of all types. He told us that his aim always is to preserve the natural flavors of the ingredients so that his food is light but he did admit with a twinkle in his eye that he does love both butter and cream and uses them where they are needed to achieve the optimum results.

Matthew agreed to send us tasting portions and we started with a sea scallop served with one of the most exquisite lobster based risottos we had ever tasted. Even at that early stage we knew that this was going to be a special night. The Pine Island oysters which followed brought the ocean into our mouths. The celery mignonette dipping sauce was delicate but these for me were oysters which needed nothing but themselves. Crabcakes made with lump crabmeat and rock shrimp served with a lemon grass beurre blanc had a beautiful texture and taste although, for my part, I do prefer crabcakes to have a little more bite.

As the sun began to set on what had been a spectacular early summer type day, the charm of the food was increasingly complemented by the romanticism of the setting. We drank a glass of a very good Babbich Sauvignon Blanc from New Zealand which is one of the range of wines they offer by the glass. BJ has put together a very impressive wine list covering all tastes and many countries and this year he intends to expand their listing of Long Island wines. John Kelly, our very professional waiter, spends part of the year working in Florida and Saratoga Springs as well as here and he was very informative during the evening about food and the restaurant world across the US.

A salad of baby spinach and endive served with pears, spiced pecans and Stilton was delicately dressed and cleansing to the palate and perfectly bridged the gap from appetizers to entrees.

Now cod is not a fish which many associate with fine dining. Indeed, from my English background, it is more associated with the staple "Cod and Chips" from the local Featuring "FLAGELS" Exclusively from Hampton Bagels.

They are flattened, regular Bagels that are baked well to give the maximum "CRUST".

ALSO - Exclusively at Hampton Bagels "Double Dipped Cinnamon Raisin".
Cinnamon raisin rolled in sugar and cinnamon twice, and baked litely to remain soft, almost like a doughnut but never fried.

ALSO - "Bobby's Bagel Chips" another Hampton Bagel exclusive.
These thinly sliced bagels are BAKED, never fried, and smothered in Sesame, Poppy, garlic, Onion, Everything, Salt and our Special Cinnamon Raisin chip dusted with Sugar and Cinnamon. Just add milk to any one of our freshly made cream cheeses and create the ULTIMATE PARTY DIP to go along with the ULTIMATE CHIP.

BAGELS baked the Old Fashioned way - boiled in water and then baked to perfection.

BIALIES made the original way - the dough made everyday and proofed fresh, and pulled by hand the same way it was done 100 years ago.

Turtle Crossing

221 Pantigo Road, East Hampton
631-324-7166

Many of us think that we are competent or even skilled at turning raw meat or fish into a great meal by the use of our 'special' marinade and our barbecue grill. When you eat at Turtle Crossing you quickly realize that your effort compared to theirs is rather like the average golfer compared to Tiger Woods.

As we parked outside the modest exterior of the restaurant our taste buds were immediately titillated by the aroma of smoking and roasting meats. The comfortable but unpretentious restaurant area, where a fascinating western mural covers the main wall, is behind the very busy take out section.

Stanley Singer and his charming wife, Nancy, opened Turtle Crossing seven years ago. Stanley was an oilman by profession, down in Oklahoma but has always loved cooking. He went to Paris to study cooking just at the start of the nouvelle cuisine vogue and then opened an upscale restaurant in Oklahoma City. He and Nancy moved to New York and then Long Island where he saw a niche for a truly top class barbecue restaurant on Eastern Long Island, so here they are.

Joseph Longo is the new Restaurant Manager at Turtle Crossing this season, coming there with a wide background in the catering business and the cooking is now in the very capable hands of Arthur Wolf, who has worked with Stanley for several years and now is imparting his own signature on many of the dishes, although he and Stanley still work closely together. All their meat is smoked on the premises and the emphasis throughout is on total freshness.

As we drank a glass of excellent Dos Equus beer, we enjoyed a selection of starters. Hush Puppies often appear on menus and sometimes have the consistency of golf balls but these were made with Jalapeno Cheddar cheese and chipotle garlic aioli and were incredibly light and tasty. A fiery quesadilla was soothed by the inclusion of seared mangos and chili seared shrimp lived up to its name but the highlight of the appetizers for us was a new addition to this year's menu. Crunchie fried artichoke hearts served with a smoked plum tomato sauce was superb and this dish deserves to be one of the hits this year.

Arthur then emerged from the kitchen bearing a plate of assorted meats to delight the eyes and palate of any carnivore. Authentic smoked meats exhibit a range of coloring that has nothing to do with additives and this plate brought hues from light to dark mahogany. As we took our first bites, our palates were filled with the aromatic distilled essences of the wood smoke and coatings. Ribs, here, are not insipid baby ribs more bone than meat, these are truly man (or giant) sized and had exactly the correct amount of marinade and seasoning. Turtle Crossing is proud of its special barbecue sauce but this is a place where putting extra sauce on Arthur and Stanley's creations may well be regarded as akin to gilding the proverbial lily – still, if you need to, its there for your pleasure. And pleasure it was, for, after the ribs came some of the most delicious pulled pork and melt in your mouth brisket that you will ever eat. In between our assaults on the meats, we found time to enjoy the Turtle Crossing cornbread, which was delicious. Assuming you have the room for it you have a choice of 'Fixins' such as baked beans, spicy mashed sweet potatoes, cous cous or Mexican rice' to complete your enjoyment.

Nancy told us that they have extended their range of wraps, which now include. Thai chicken and Peking duck wraps as well as shrimp and salmon based ones.

All of the desserts are made on the premises. Brownies, at first, sounded rather mundane but not Turtle Crossing's marble swirl specials and after the first taste it was easy to understand their deserved popularity. Similarly the cheesecake and the chocolate chip cookies were excellent are perfectly complemented the rest of the meal.

The take out and catering sides are a major part of their operation and Nancy said that they often get requests for complete barbecue meals for 20 or 30 people. Whether the host then owns up to the origins of the food or passes it off as his own creation is, of course, never known!

Turtle Crossing received a further boost to its already high reputation as a barbecue place of excellence, a couple of years ago, when, on a visit to the Hamptons, President Clinton decided that this was the place for him and a large party of celebrities to eat. Now, unfortunately President Clinton is likely to go down in history as a man who made some doubtful choices. There will never be any second-guessing him though on his choice of probably the best barbecue place on Long Island, Turtle Crossing.

fish and chip shop. Matthew, using the freshest Montauk codfish, presents a dish where the fish has been very lightly and perfectly cooked with a lobster, spring pea and new potato ragout. This was definitely one of the many times during the evening when it was tempting to say that tasting should stop and request a full size portion but in the interests of trying to bring an appreciation of the full range of the menu (and also trying to be careful of our waist lines), we proceeded to the next dish.

The menu stated 'rare sesame seared yellow fin tuna' and it should have added 'sushi quality' because any sushi chef would have been delighted with this superb fish. The tuna was served with baby box choy, a ginger sticky rice cake and star anise ponzu (a Japanese marinade and dipping sauce commonly used with sushi) and again we could only applaud the blending of textures and subtle tastes.

Finally, from the range of main courses, we tasted the grilled Murrray farm chicken where, just as with the cod fish, Matthew took a high quality but simple ingredient and by cooking it perfectly and accompanying it with a truffle leek sauce and excellent vegetables transformed it into a very special dish.

While he was attending culinary school Matthew was seated in alphabetical order next to a fellow student named Jenny. They not only learned to cook but also to fall in love and marry and today, Jenny Ross is the Pastry Chef at East Hampton Point. We were extremely glad that Matthew's tasting portions had left a little room for us to appreciate her considerable expertise because her lemon and lime tartlet with Italian meringue and almond cookie crust, the strawberry and rhubarb custard tart with strawberry basil ice cream and a fresh fruit pavlova with melon sorbet were all enchanting as, with a good cup of coffee, we came to the end of an eating treat which more than matched the beauty of the setting.

Recommendations.

This is a beautiful, romantic restaurant with food to match. All of the staff are good at their jobs and moreover seem to enjoy their work. The cooking is uniformly of an extremely high standard and it was a little unnerving to meet Matthew Ross and discover that he is all of 25 years old and presumably is still going to raise his talents to even higher levels in the years ahead.

East Hampton Point is a perfect place for a wedding or other major celebration and also is a charming place for couples or groups to meet for a meal and a view to remember. Already the restaurant, deservedly, has a high reputation, which looks like climbing even higher. The combination of the physical beauty of the setting, the very high quality of the cooking and the charm and friendliness of the staff makes a combination hard to beat. You will leave here with a song in your heart and a wish to return soon.

East Hampton Point is open every night for dinner and for lunch on Friday and Saturday with brunch served on Sunday. Reservations are strongly recommended.

First courses range from $8 to $14. Main course from $21 to $34 for a steak. Desserts are $8.

BOAT BAR & BISTRO IS OPEN

The Maidstone Arms (324-5006) has announced the creation of Boat Bar & Bistro, a casual bistro located in the renovated Boat Room of The Maidstone Arms. The menu is made up of "small bites" such as grilled pizza; satays of chicken with Thai peanut sauce and crab cakes; and "big bites" like Maidstone's housemade hamburger with handcut french fries; and seared local fish sandwich with mesclun greens. There is also a dessert menu—"sweet bites" and a "sips" drink menu featuring a half dozen specialty drinks and a unique selection of rums. They will be open seven days from 3 to 10 p.m. Sunday through Thursday and until 10:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

CARIBBEAN NIGHTS IS JUNE 2ND

The Retreat's "Caribbean Nights" benefit on June 2nd will be hosted and sponsored by NV Tsunami Restaurant and Night Club in East Hampton. The beneficiary, The Retreat, is a non-profit organization that offers counseling and support services to victims of domestic violence, as well as an education program for children. The event features music by the Caribbean group, Island Boys Band. In addition to the fun island music there will be an open bar, appetizers, raffle of items such as golf rounds, VIP Hampton Classic tickets, sunset cruises and goodie bags. Tickets may be purchased by calling Cheryl Connelly at (631) 329-4398.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Henry's

2495 Montauk Highway, Bridgehampton
537-9416

Sunday, April 29, a sunny spring day just before the turn of May.

It makes one poetic, as well as ravenous for a good meal. So we chose Henry's, located near the Monument in Bridgehampton, It's now into its third season, managed by Gayle Donahue, whose culinary judgment you can trust.

Henry's is like a French salon, warm and luxurious, formal and informal at the same time. Its soft lights and intimate setting make it the kind of place where you feel comfortable bringing guests. Recently redecorated, its walls are a soft, soothing shade of red, its polished wood floors, a darker tone than before. Contemporary prints, placed judiciously, add an artistic touch without making the place seem like an impersonal, austere gallery. And lively conversat √ion abounds.

As we would expect from a fine restaurant, ice water and warm bread were brought to our table as soon as we were seated. A smiling waitress handed us menus, suggesting we might wish to consider the Fixe Prix Special (3 courses, consisting of salad or soup, entree and desert — at $25.00 per person, its an excellent buy).

To begin with, we ordered a bottle of Sauvignon Blanc, Castello della Sala, Antinori "98, (at a modest $25.00), a selection we knew would go well with anything we might order.

After looking over the menu, the four of us decided on the Fixe Prix Special, which we were told varies from time to time. For starters we ordered the soup of the day and crispy romaine and arugula salad with shaved Parmesan, croutons and Caesar dressing.

The soup of the day was a thick delicious blending of potatoes, herbs, and other ingredients which resulted in an exotic, typically French flavor. The salad was served plain, with the dressing on the side, to use as one wished.

Since I always enjoy seafood, I ordered the grilled Scottish salmon with stewed baby artichokes, slow roasted plum tomatoes and deep fried panissa. My companion ordered the crispy flattened chicken with spring vegetables, white wine and rosemary. One of our guests ordered the salmon, the other, spaghetti with Little Neck clams, roasted plum tomatoes, crispy bacon and arugula.

The grilled Scottish salmon was served in chunk form, which is perhaps typical of the "Scottish" variety, though I was accustomed to having salmon in fillet form. It had a rather "gamy" taste which made you think it was fresh from the sea. It was complemented nicely by the stewed baby artichokes and other ingredients.

Between sips of wine, my friend said how much he was enjoying his spaghetti and clams, commenting favorably on the addition of crispy bacon and arugula.

For dessert we decided to have chocolate and pear sorbet, both excellent choices. We agreed that the sorbet was the best we ever had. The coffee was rich and flavorful.

All during our meal the waitress was very attentive, filling our water glasses; pouring more wine, bringing more warm bread. She seemed to be on hand to fulfill our every need all during our meal. Excellent service is certainly one of the highlights of Henry's, which one does not always find in the Hamptons.

A raw bar is among Henry's features, serving oysters, shellfish, little neck clams, jumbo shrimp, and other items, such as a mixed seafood plate (2 oysters, 2 clams, 2 jumbo shrimp, served with lemon and mignonette).

Ceviche of the day is another raw bar special, consisting of seafood with avocado, red onion, fresh mint, cilantro and lime juice, And if you like steak, keep in mind that you can always get an excellent grilled New York strip with French fried onion rings, sauteed spinach and Bordelaise sauce.

Other entrees you might wish to consider are osso bucco, Alaskan halibut, braised rabbit, and grilled tuna.

Our complements to the Chef de Cuisine, Paul Del Favero.

Since Henry's hours are subject to seasonal change, please call 631-537-5665 before you make your dinner plans.

The Essence Of Life: The Sea

From the depths of the sea, from the soul of the Atlantic, comes a remarkable new line of the most exquisite body treatments from ORLANE, PARIS.

Using natural rich resources, they have created creams and lotions that will take you back to the cradle of life-the ocean. It was here that the first cell took shape and it contained all the elements necessary to sustain and nourish life.

B21 THALASSOTHERAPY-term derived from the Greek Thalassa (ocean), is a Marine Beauty Institute in your own environment, your home. By using the oceans multitype properties, it hydrates, nurtures, stimulates and provides vitamins. It also provides amino acids and endless traces of elements. Along with helping the body firm and refine, it also has the added benefit of fighting visible aging.

ORLANE LABORATORIES have developed a seaweed based cosmetic agent with outstanding performance. The seaweed that grows on Brittany's Brehat archipelago, known as the "Pink Island", is fed by an exceptionally nourishing source: the Gulf Stream. This current is constantly enriched with essential nutrients as it crosses the Atlantic.

Enjoy a wave of pleasure every day, magical moments brimming with well-being. This remineralizing, anti-free radical, firming, contouring-refining wave is composed of 6 PRODUCTS FOR THE BODY.

The range features:

1. EXFOLIATING PACK WITH SEA SALT
2. ANTI-AGING FIRMING CREME
3. FIRMING GEL FOR THE BUST
4. CONTOURING MUD PACK "SAUNA" EFFECT
5. SLIMMING DETOXINATING GEL
6. CONTOURING CREME

EXFOLIATING PACK WITH SEA SALT:

A natural exfoiliation revitalizing surface microcirculation as well as promoting the elemination of excess water. It is a concentration of sea salt, seaweed and toning essential oils. Use once or twice a week, mix well and apply to moistened skin. 500ml clear glass jar; retail: $80.00

ANTI-AGING FIRMING CREME:

An exceptional anti-age cream for the body. The skin is firmed, "lifted", and rejuvenated by this fine and silky textured cream. This product is applied morning and evening in a light massage all over the body. Used regularly with the EXFOILIATING PACK WITH SEA SALT. 200m. clear glass jar; retail: $90.00

FIRMING GEL FOR THE BUST:

An intensive treatment to restore the busts firmness and tone, this white emulsion gel is the ideal treatment for the first signs of slackening, after following a diet or to combat signs of aging. The breasts are visible firmed and softer to the touch, the busts contours are better defined. 50 ml clear glass dispenser bottle; retail: $85.00

CONTOURING MUD PACK "SAUNA" EFFECT:

The highlight of the THALASSOTHERAPY LINE is their MUD-PACK. This product encourages microcirculation promoting the elemination of toxins and wastes. The skin is visibly smoother, firm and even. Fatty deposits are gradually reduced...as if remodeling the silhouette is more refined. The MUD PACK is mixed well and massaged lightly all over the areas needing treatment. Cover with transparent film for 20-30 minutes. Rinse off. To obtain a real "sauna effect", remain in a warm bath for 10 minutes with the much pack on the skin. Rinse. 500ml clear glass jar; retail: $80.00

SLIMMING DETOXINATION GEL:

This product prevents water retention and has a rapid contouring effect. It improves cellular metabolism, revitalizes and strengthens skin. It give the legs an immediate sense of lightness, chasing away tiredness and discomfort. The perfect ending to a busy day! Applied morning and/or evening. It will not stain. 250 ml dispenser bottle; retail: $80.00

CONTOURING CREME:

This creme reduces the appearance of fatty deposits, spongy tissue and unwanted curves and as an additional bonus, helps prevent them from returning. It revitalizes surface microcirculation and encourages the elimination of wastes. Immediately the skin is visibly smoothed, firmed and supple. It is applied daily with a light massaging motion over the whole body. 200 mg clear glass jar; retail: $80.00

The products have a definite 'sea note' for fragrance with an 'aromatherapy' effect, composed of essences of rosemaryand thyme among other plants. Essential Oils alone provide the fragrance for the EXFOILIATING PACK w/ SEA SALT and the CONTOURING MUD PACK.

At the heart of the range is a blend of active marine ingredients from the Atlantic Ocean. It is a combination of seaweeds selected for their indisputable effectiveness, purity and perfect ososis with the cell universe.

And the skin is reborn.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

About Face: Shaving, Waxing And Girls Are Weird

Just the thought of removing hair on a daily basis now is sending me in circles! Every other day is bad enough but now is the time for shorts, bathing suits, Capris, tank tops.. And getting the legs, underarms and bikini area ready for them is upon us.

I really think hair grows faster in the summer. Or at least it seems that way. Let's discuss a few of the ways of hair removal and then you can chose for yourself what you feel is most comfortable for you. The most common, fastest, cheapest way is to use a razor. Arm yourself with a good.. and I do mean good, shaving cream. Don't skimp here. There is a difference in that can for .89 and the other for a few bucks more. You can choose from gels or creams. And while you are at it.. look into a good razor also. Double edge is great, triple is now better. Make sure when you begin, your legs (and any other parts you have in mind) have been throughly wet and soaped down. The razor should be sharp. Discard if used more than 3 or 4 times. Where you begin is your preference..The preferred way is to work from the bottom of the leg up. When you get to the back of the thigh.. try going from left to right as well as up and down. Hair tends to grow at different angles back there. Underarms also.Get used to going in different directions. Pat your legs dry... don't rub.. and apply a good moistuizer when finished and slightly damp.

If shaving isn't what you want to do you may be a candidate for waxing. Whether you choose to do it yourself or go to a salon, there are a few things you should and should not do. Do not rough up your skin right before a waxing. It may turn into a nasty rash afterwards. Wash with a gentle soap and don't put any moisturizers on after you shower. The wax will have a hard time adhearing to the skin and it will repeatedly have to be done over and over irritating the area. Waxing definately lasts longer than shaving. The hair root comes up when waxing is done and it takes a bit longer for a new one to start than as if it were shaved. You will feel the hair growing on a shaved area a few hours later!

There is also the creams and lotions for removal. They have improved tremendously over the years with the fragrance and performance. If the hair is quite coarse or gray, it may take repeated attempts at removal. It seems more time consuming than the other methods but some people prefer this.

I am not too familiar with the machines that rotate and rip!.. But I have heard that it truly does hurt! Some say you can get used to it... I have a hard time getting used to pain.

A few of the methods above have a tendency to leave the skin with slight ingrown hairs.. other than waxing, it is recommended that you use a loofah or some other coarse cloth to exfoiliate the area. Another side effect of shaving that is such a discomfort are the bumps one gets. There is a product called BIKINI ZONE that claims to remove these unsightly eruptions and redness right away.

Anyone having luck with any other method, I would love to hear from you. And now... for a great summer quick read...

Have you ever wanted to just jot down any thought that slides into your head? Whether it be about someone, or just the things that run aimlessly through the mind? I just finished a great little book that has done just that and more.It is a wonderful fast reading book to absorb as you are settling in the sands of the Hamptons: Girls Are Weird by Pam Gaslow, Poodlette Press, N.Y. $10.00

It is an hysterical account of the day to day musings of a single girl, who insists she is on only one medication. She is only 30 and a resident of Manhattan, but seems to me she has had a lot of thoughts to put down in such a short time. From rubber bands in her noodles to her Rolling East: driving to the Hamptons during rush hour with stick. She has a wonderful witty sense of humor and it shows on every page. You will find yourself rereading some of the pages in total disbelief only to realize a few minutes later that you think that has happened to you or at the very least that thought HAS crossed your mind in one form or another many times. I don't think Girls Are Weird, I think we all tend to think along the same lines and Amy has brought it all out in the open. I anxiously await her next batch of personal thoughts. Thanks to Jennifer at Siren PR for this great summer book!!

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Soothe, Revitalize And Nourish

What is a weed? “A plant whose virtues have not yet been discovered,” Ralph Waldo Emerson once said. And now innovative soap creator Melinda Novak is putting the virtues of weeds to work. In unveiling Melinda’s Weeds collection at the New York City Extract Show, Novak is showing the world just what magic weeds can work.

Sag Harbor soap innovator Melinda Novak has launched her exclusive prestige Aromatherapy Collection at New York City’s Extracts Show at the Jacob Javits Center last month. The elegant products are the result of years of experimenting with natural products.

The launch is most probably a first in the bath and beauty world. It is unlikely that anyone has capitalized on weeds, the plants that Novak says are the unsung heroes of nature. Novak has created a line of bath products to soothe, revitalize and nourish the skin...”Weeds reflect the best parts of our personalities,” Novak says. They’re pioneers. They’re adaptable. They thrive.”

Melinda’s Weeds: Melinda’s Weeds features four essential products: Herbaceous Bath Salts, in a muslin bag, contain clary sage. Herbaceous Body wash features mugwort and chickweed. Herbaceous Body Lotion is made with plantain. Herbaceous Soap features calendula petals, among other ingredients.

Novak brews weeds such as comfrey root, chickweed, mugwort, calendula petals, dandelion and plantain. The cooking must be done gently over a number of days to preserve the nutritive powers in the plant oils. “Weeds are the perfect symbol of self-discovery and transformation.” Novak says. “They’re plants that just aren’t noticed. They were always there but we didn’t know what the value was. Now we’re discovering that.”

Certainly the Harry Potter books have brought allure to the ancient powers of weeds. For centuries weeds were used by magicians, midwives, and spellmakers. Their curative powers were crucial to healers over the centuries. But in modern times we’ve overlooked the plants that were hardiest and closest to us. “Being more natural brings us closer to the mysteries we need to solve in order to untangle our own psyches and souls,” Novak says. She is so excited about bringing the power of weeds to the public.

SAG HARBOR SOAP COMPANY

Aromatherapy Collection: will feature hand-poured glycerin soap, body wash, body lotion and bath salts in each of three fragrances. Triple Lavender, the brainchild of Melinda Novak, instills a sense of calm and well being while softening and soothing the skin. Rose Geranium is balancing and harmonizing. The spicy, citrus smell of the gernaium, known as the ”spicy rose” is extra pleasurable to the senses. Eucalyptus and Yarrow is refreshing. Eucalyptus is a woody herb, yarrow is a floral.

“Simplicity and naturalness are the purest marks of distinction,” Somerset Maugham once wrote. Sag Harbor Soap uses perhaps half the ingredients of most other makers. Most soaps include parabin, a synthetic, or petroleum products, which are ultimately not good for our skins or the environment. “It’s the Melinda difference between a homemade cookie and a supermarket cookie,” Melinda points out. “We use good ingredients and make simple products. That makes them better.”

The elegant packaging features a steel-cut of a beautiful woman in her natural glory, floating on clouds.

“I want to make bath products that are the best for our skin, best for our environment, and delightful for our senses,” Novak says.

The Aromatherapy Collection will be on sale in stores locally at Turpan, East Hampton, Ned Parkhouse, Sag Harbor, Renaissance, Southampton, with more to come. The Aromatherapy Collection is also sold nationally. For more information call Melinda Novak at 631-725-7070.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

Men's Health : No Ands, Ifs Or Butts

By Rich Stanton

I used to go to the gym after work almost every day. I could lift weights and do a 20 minute Stairmaster, my regular routine, in a little more than an hour. Then I would go home, eat a wonderful dinner including dessert and call it a day. And I looked good!

To be fair, I had a job which required a lot of physical activity, so I was walking and lifting all day. I could eat what I wanted because burning off that big steak with baked potato and lots of butter was easy. Things have changed.

Now I have a job which requires me to sit on my butt all day. I have noticed that I have maybe more than a few extra pounds on me and that muscle tone that was so easy to maintain is only a memory. The other people in my office have noticed too, but they have been too polite to say anything to my face. And believe me, if you work in an office with other people, they notice, especially the women. I think women take great joy out of watching a man struggle with a problem that they grapple with daily. "Oh the poor baby, he can't have the Biggie size at lunch anymore". Then they laugh so hard that they start crying. "Suck it up, Buddy, I've lived on lettuce leaves and water for three years!" "But wait," I say "I used to be in shape, I looked good … really… I did!" That just brings more laughter. I was feeling down about the whole thing, but I decided to get back into shape as fast as possible. I would become a gymaholic!

I started slowly, lifting a little and using a treadmill, then the exercise bike. I then graduated to the Stairmaster, which I believed held the secret to a great bod. After all, when I was in shape, I could go for 20 minutes at the highest speed on the machine. I noticed that my workouts lasted about 2 + hours and I wasn't getting anywhere. I still looked bad.

One day after another torture session, I was sitting on a workout bench watching a young shapely woman on the Stairmaster. Maybe if I watched her for a while, I would pick up a new technique that would help me get into better shape. Then, a guy who was a regular at the gym sat down on the next bench. He was in great shape and he seemed to work out for only an hour or so a day. He nodded to me and said "you workout pretty hard". "Thanks," I said "But I don't seem to get the results I want." "Well, I've stayed in shape my whole life" he said "and I think there are only a couple of things that you have to do."

None of what he told me was ground breaking. It was just common sense. That was six months ago. I have used his ideas to get, at least, part of the way back to where I was. When I saw him the other day, I mentioned that he would be in the paper. He said that he didn't want his real name used, so I'll call him Joe. This is Joe's get in shape recipe.

First, realize that you can't look like you want to overnight. It took you a while to get out of shape and it's going to take you a while to get back into shape. You may have to put up with the office snickering for a little longer.

Second, work out as often as you can up to six days a week. Spend no more than 90 minutes, from start to finish in the gym, but go there and work. Watching other people doesn't count. Get a routine and stick with it for six weeks or so, then change it.

Third, if you can't do your whole routine because of time constraints, the single most important exercise you can do is the squat. If you have never done a squat before, get someone at the gym to show you how. Squats are a total body exercise so you can get a full workout just by doing them.

Finally, diet is 70% of being in shape. On the days that you don't or can't go to the gym, you can still work on getting in shape by watching what you eat. All that stuff about eating fruit and vegetables is true, so don't fool yourself by thinking that you can work hard in the gym and eat like a horse (unless you have a physically active job).

I think these ideas work for both men and women and hopefully if you are trying to get into shape, they will work for you. Remember, drink lots of water instead of any high caloric drink including those workout drinks. And when you pass up that fattening food, you save yourself from having to work out an extra day. Soon, instead of being the butt of the office jokes, they'll be checking out your butt!

Health Is Ageless

There are as many ways to work fitness into the daily routine as there are people, and local seniors will check some of them out in the eighth National Senior Health and Fitness Day, Wednesday, May 30. World Gym Hampton Bays will serve as an official host site for the day with a program of information and fun. Beginning at 12 noon, participants will join an estimated 100,000 seniors at 1000 sites across the nation as they walk, dance, play and learn their way to better fitness and health.

Each year, event coordinators in every state invent imaginative ways to engage seniors in regular exercise. Experts know that even small increases in physical activity can lead to better health. NSHFD gives older adults the opportunity to begin or renew a commitment to fitness and to celebrate the senior lifestyle.

Nancy Kouris, General Manager of World Gym Hampton Bays, says, "We want to demonstrate that exercise can be fun. Our seniors look forward to this chance to experience some appropriate and enjoyable forms of exercise. It's also a great opportunity for them to find out about health-related resources in our community.

The 1996 report, Physical Activity and Health: A Report of the Surgeon General concludes, "older adults can obtain significant health benefits with a moderate amount of physical activity, preferably daily." Among the benefits are increased cardiorespiratory endurance, as well as stronger muscles, which help reduce the risk of falling and improve the ability to perform the routine tasks of daily life. Moderate physical activity also can reduce the risk of heart disease, high blood pressure, colon cancer and feelings of depression and anxiety. To gain these benefits, people should engage in regular physical activity on all, or most days of the week.

National Senior Health and Fitness Day, coordinated by the Mature Market Resource Center, is always held on the last Wednesday of May as part of Older Americans Month. May is also National Physical Fitness and Sports month.

For more information about this event, contact Nancy Kouris at 631-723-3174. –Mariah Corrente

Auto Mag Launch

Shelter Island Media International announced this week the official launch of International Auto Style & Sport, a lifestyle magazine for auto enthusiasts.

Shelly Stout and Mary Faulkner

Publishers Shelley Stout and Mary Faulkner, both of Shelter Island, celebrated the publication of their spring issue with car aficionados, media representatives and invited guests in the automotive industry at a party given by the magazine and Christie's International Motor Cars of Beverly Hills, California at the Lyndhurst property on the Hudson River in Tarrytown, New York. More than 500 people from around the country attended the gala event.

International Auto Style & Sport debuted as a prototype last September at the Louis Vuitton Classic in Rockefeller Center. Comments from the magazine's target audience, declaring the prototype a critical success, prompted Ms. Faulkner and Ms. Stout to continue their efforts to put the magazine into full-time production.

Phil Fleming, Vice President of the Ferrari Club of America, remarked, "It is arguably the best car magazine in the industry." Bruce Wennerstrom, President of the Madison Avenue Sports Car Driving and Chowder Society and organizer of the Greenwich Concours, declared it to be "phenomenal," Ray Noble, automotive artist and long-time Chowder Society member, wrote, "You have delivered an out-of-the-park home run," and Dan's Papers called it "A magnificent new magazine."

Ms. Faulkner stated, "because we focus on the people in the car world and their lifestyles – as well as the cars – we have delivered a unique publication for enthusiasts and filled a niche that wasn't being filled. We want Auto Style & Sport to become the Wine Spectator for car people." Ms. Faulkner said, "We are proud to be an official sponsor of the Hamptons Concours this Memorial Day weekend." The event will take place all weekend on the grounds of the Hampton Classic in Bridgehampton. Tickets and information are available from the American Cancer Society by calling 631-283-6277.

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

As I write this week's column, the dry weather continues. As I went to Cornell University in Ithaca over the weekend to attend the Class VIII graduation of LEAD NY, it rained the entire ride. They received about an inch or so. But not enough HERE to stop the dust. The weather is supposed to turn this week with rain expected most of the week. I hope not, as it is a week away from strawberry season. The last thing we need is too much rain and damp conditions as berries like it sunny and dry. It seems that the minute berry season starts, you know the rains will come. Oh well, what can you do.

I mentioned my weekend at Cornell, what a magnificent campus. Absolutely beautiful! Ithaca's College graduation was Saturday, but Friday night they had a fireworks display over Cayuga Lake. It was awesome. I watched from Cornell, high up over the lake; it was really cool. Saturday morning we had a LEAD NY Board of Directors Meeting to appoint participants for Class IX. I am proud to announce that after only one Long Island participant over the last 16 years, we have four heading to Class IX; my Associate Director, Becky Wiseman, Farm Credit Director, Steve Weir, irascible Sagaponak farmer and good friend John White, and Maria Rabizo from NYS Labor Department. Congratulations to all of you. We are very proud! LEAD NY is a two-year leadership-training institute to further develop and refine communication and leadership skills to advance NY State agriculture.

This class is made up of 28 individuals from across the state, half from agribusiness and half from production (farmers). They will spend 45 days over two years traveling to Washington, Toronto, Europe (or South America); Albany, New York City and

Marine Debris: A Long Island Hazard

By Mary Foster Morgan

Six-pack rings and other plastics wash up on the beach routinely. Is this a problem?

While my beach-going friends don't seem to think so, the answer is "yes" according the United States Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). They say that wash-ups of marine debris are a widespread water pollution problem threatening our coastal waters.

We Long Islanders love our beaches and marine waters. But did you know that here on Long Island, floatable debris has been identified as a major source of Sound pollution? The Long Island Sound Study (1994) found it to be a dangerous problem. It harms and kills marine life. It is a hazard to beach-goers and boaters. And is a visual symbol of environmental degradation with serious economic consequences for the Long Island region's $1.2 billion fishing/tourism economy.

How to solve this ugly problem? Beach clean ups and educating the public about stewardship are what both these agencies recommend.

We are pleased to announce that the Long Island Sound Study recently granted the Marine Program of Cornell Cooperative Extension funds to develop Sound Stewardship: A Marine Debris, Water Pollution & Beach Clean-up Model School Course in four schools. Under the leadership of education head Stacy Myers, the course is being designed to increase student and public awareness of this major Long Island Sound polluter and the citizenry's important role in stewardship. The course includes two classroom visits, a teacher resource guide, and beach clean up day. A video on the project will be broadcast on public access television. Winning student essays will appear in the CCE journal On the Water. The course is being developed as a model to be tested in four schools serving 3 classes in each schools, reaching 300 students.

Interested? We are seeking funding to adapt and expand this pilot to other Long Island schools. Schools and other interested parties may contact Mary Foster at the Cornell Marine Program at (631) 852-8660.

–Mary Foster Morgan

around the state to gain comprehensive knowledge of the agricultural industry. There are professionals from all walks of life; government regulators, bankers, crop consultants, extension agents, academics, advocacy representatives and, of course, farmers. Class VIII participants had a unique opportunity recently on their "foreign affairs" trip. They had arranged a ten-day trip to England, Holland and Belgium to visit in particular, Europe's concerns over GMO's (genetically modified organisms). As it turned out, England had a major breakout of Hoof and Mouth Disease. Therefore, they were not able to visit many farms because of the fear Class VIII members would "carry" the disease back to New York. Hoof and Mouth Disease can be carried in your lungs, which is something new that I learned from the State Veterinarian. Anyhow, Class VIII had a lesson on flexibility and being able to improvise on short notice. Their trip went well but they were disappointed they couldn't see many of the farms. They did a lot of phone conferences instead with the farmers. The Class VIII participants are planning to go back to Europe when the disease problem is under control.

Class IX members will choose where they want to go for their "foreign affairs" trip. Becky is very excited about the prospect as she enjoys travel and new experiences. The new class starts off in July with a family orientation at Cornell. Then the program officially starts in the fall. Becky, Steve, John, and Maria will have a life experience and education that will benefit the entire agricultural industry in NY state and nation wide. We at LIFB wish them all our hearty congratulations. We are certain they will do Long Island proud! Stay tuned.

Regional BBQ: Time To Fire Up The Grill

It's Memorial Day Weekend and Americans across the country will be enjoying a day off from work. Maybe we can go to one of the local parades and after that, let's go to a barbecue. Ah, the fine American summertime tradition; grilled meats, a variety of salads and lots of cold beverages. There are many variations on this classic event and what we might find to eat at a barbecue on Long Island is different from what might be served in say, Atlanta or Phoenix or St. Louis. Let's take a short tour of regional barbecues.

First, there is the American classic. Everyone knows this one: hot dogs, hamburgers, potato salad and Cole slaw. There's lots of ketchup, mustard and pickles to put on your burger or dog. If we want to upgrade the classic, we might add chicken in barbecue sauce, of course. All of the meat is cooked on a standard gas grill and somewhere around is a tub full of ice and a variety of drinks to keep the kids and adults happy.

Traveling south, barbecue fare changes dramatically. Pig pickin' roasts or whole hog roasts are the classic here. Whole pigs are roasted all day over open fires. The meat is extremely flavorful and tender when cooked correctly and the skin is cracklin' crisp. Tomato-based sauces for the pork is a no-no. Instead, Southerners use vinegar and spice marinade and dipping sauce. Don't knock it until you try it. It is great!

The Midwest is home to much of America's beef producers and so it comes to no surprise that beef ribs are the main fare here. There are many different styles of ribs including Kansas City, St. Louis and Texas. Each uses different combinations of herbs and spices in a dry rub which is put on the meat prior to cooking, just like a marinade.

In the Southwest, the south of the border influence is obvious. The chicken is marinated with cumin and coriander and side dishes include black bean salad, tortilla chips, guacamole and salsa (which is now the most popular condiment in the US).

The food is not the only variation at these different locations. How the meats are grilled is just as important a difference. As mentioned earlier, the American classic is now the gas powered barbecue grill. But that wasn't always the case. People used to (and some purists still do) use a charcoal grill. Remember them?

BBQ

Put the charcoal from the blue and white bag into the grill with some newspaper and a little lighter fluid, stand back, toss in a match and poof! The fire was lit. Then it was time to wait until the coals got kind of white around the edges before any cooking could begin.

Another style of cooking meat for a barbecue is in a smoker. This is not like smoking brined meat like ham or bacon, but slow cooking dry rubbed or dry marinated meats. The meat, typically beef or pork, is cooked by adjusting the amount of heat and smoke in the barbecue. Beef brisket, a popular choice among aficionados, is cooked for up to 18 hours. The slow cooking guarantees tenderness and the smoke guarantees flavor. The types of wood used to smoke the meats helps determine the flavor with the classic being mesquite, but if you don't like the flavor from a particular wood, try another.

For the non-carnivores, we need a name change and we are all set. Instead of barbecues, here on Long Island, we call them clambakes. The classic Long Island clambake includes clams (obviously), lobster, mussels and side salads. The seafood is placed in a pot, tub or barrel with potatoes, corn on the cob and seaweed and boiled until done. Lemons and butter are the important condiments. A New England variation is the clam boil. Different name, same party.

In other parts of the country, different seafood becomes the hit of the party based on availability. In the south, shrimp are the star of the show. They can be simply boiled or marinated and grilled. Either way they are delicious. In the Northwest, salmon is the main course. An interesting style of cooking salmon is plank grilling. This requires a side of dry rubbed salmon to be tied to a plank of wood, then placed facing an open fire. The fish gets cooked in the same way as the smoked meats; by the heat of the flame and the smoke from the wood. Again, different woods will create different flavors. Pacific Alder is very popular with fish grillers.

I hope this tour gave you some ideas for your barbecue or clambake. There really no such thing as the typical Memorial Day party, except for the guests. You know Uncle Louie will have one too many, and the kids will yell and run around too much, but at least you can enjoy different types of food. Now who is going to clean up?

POLICE BLOTTER

A brawl in East Quogue was actively participated in by about fifty youths according to police, and one eighteen year old Hampton Bays resident was stabbed in the hand and, worse, struck in the head. The fracas involved the use of bottles, baseball bats and sticks. It appeared that a group of youths from Shirley had come to a party intending to avenge a slight done to a member of Shirley's fair sex at a recent party.

Hell hath no fury.... An aggrieved Sagaponack woman whom police say was involved in a love triangle, broke into the house of another woman and began to punch and kick her. When the surprised victim fled the house, the attacker followed, got in her car, and tried to run the hapless woman over – who told police she plunged into the woods for safety from where she made her way to a neighbor's house.

In a similar vein: police were called to calm a gentleman's ex-girlfriend, who had burst into his house, become somewhat violent and refused to leave. When police arrived she would not put down a potted plant she was holding and would not leave the premises. Which she, of course, eventually did, under arrest.

An East Hampton Town Police officer observed a curious altercation on Spring Close Highway outside the Suffolk County National Bank. One man was sitting atop another, the former hitting the latter, who did not seem to be resisting. After police arrested the assailant, the victim said that he had been driving on Route 27 when a car behind him flagged him down. When he had stopped to see what the driver wanted, he had been attacked.

Gosmans in Montauk reported the theft of fourteen metal chairs used for outdoor seating. The public is advised to be on the lookout for said chairs, of an aqua blue color.

A shopper at the Bridgehampton Commons reported to police that she had found her license plates removed from her car when she had returned from shopping. She suspected a group of four men who had been nearby in a red Honda Civic, smoking pot, when she had parked. They had made some flattering remarks in regard to her car.

BUYER BEWARE

Dear Dan,

I'm writing this as a warning to unsuspecting Sag Harbor shoppers or tourists who might suffer the same fate I did last year, that is, receive a parking ticket in a two-hours zone that is not clearly marked.

I got the ticket last summer, on Washington Street, just east of Route 114. I was with a wheelchair-bound cousin, and, finding that Route 114 parking lot was full (and has no handicapped spots), I parked on the street close to a break in the curb. I didn't remember a time limit, but thinking that there might be one, I checked every sign near my car and found that they all said "one way".

We spent five leisurely hours in town that day, happily contributing to the coffers of restaurant and storeowners. When we returned to our car, turning left on Washington Street from Main Street, we noticed a "two-hour parking" sign at the west end of the one-way street. The fact is, one could turn right on Washington from Church Street and take one of three or four spots without knowing about the restriction (unless one walked directly to Main Street and turned around and looked back). I protested to the police, but wound up in a court in Southampton (a ghastly experience), where I settled for a $15 reduction since I couldn't give up another day to fight.

I wrote to Mayor William Young in October, asking hat another sign be posted east of Church Street on Washington Street. I never heard from him. I wrote again a week ago, and, so far, have not received a letter. Rude, don't you think?

Anyway, in the absence of a response or action from Sag Harbor officials, I want to announce to all who might visit that otherwise delightful tone: Beware of parking on Washington Street: it's two-hours, posted or not!

"So that the Earth may be healed"

Farms, Horse Pastures, Golf Courses, Residential, Commercial, Schools, Churches, Large Acreage or Small, Turf, Trees, Scrubs, Wherever Plants Grow in Soil!!!

Give your landscape a treat. Ten years of research and development is now available for your property and farm. You now have an option for beautiful landscapes and farms without the use of soil destroying fertilizers and toxic chemicals. Organics by neglect is no longer necessary. These Organic products produce the healthiest soil for the healthiest plants that will repel pests and dis-ease. My organic methods are the best for your soils. Call for a consultation today.

Bridgehampton Area Host Families Needed Now

Foreign high school students are scheduled to arrive very soon for academic semester and year program homestays, and the sponsoring organization needs a few more local host families.

According to Pacific Intercultural Exchange (P.I.E.) Executive Director, John Doty, the students are all between the ages of 15 and 18 years, are English-speaking, have their own spending money, carry accident and health insurance, and are anxious to share their cultural experiences with their new American families. P.I.E. currently has programs to match almost every family's needs, ranging in length from a semester to a full academic year, where the students attend local high schools.

P.I.E. area representatives match students with host families by finding common interests and lifestyles through an informal in-home meeting. Prospective host families are able to review student applications and select the perfect match. As there are no "typical" host families, P.I.E. can fit a student into just about any situation, whether it be a single parent, a childless couple, a retired couple or a large family.

Families who host for P.I.E. are also eligible to claim a $50.00 per month charitable contribution deduction on their itemized tax returns for each month they host a sponsored student.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

For the upcoming programs, P.I.E. has students from Spain, Germany, Latvia, the Former Soviet Union, Venezuela, Argentina, Brazil, Mexico, Mongolia, Italy, Paraguay, Australia, Sweden, Yugoslavia, China, Belgium, Vietnam and many other countries. P.I.E. has also been invited to participate in a special government-funded program to bring scholarship students from the Newly Independent States of the former Soviet Union to the United States.

P.I.E. is a non-profit educational organization that has sponsored more than 18,000 students from 40 countries since its founding in 1975. The organization is designated by the United States Department of State and is listed by the Council on Standards for International Educational Travel (CSIET), certifying that the organization complies with the standards set forth in CSIET's Standards for International Educational Travel Programs.

Doty encourages families to contact the program immediately, as it will allow the proper time for the students and hosts to get to know one another before they actually meet for the first time.

Bridgehampton area families interested in learning more about student exchange or arranging for a meeting with a community representative may call P.I.E., toll-free, at 1-800-631-1818. The agency also has travel/study program opportunities available for American high school students as well as possibilities for community volunteers to assist and work with area host families, students and schools.

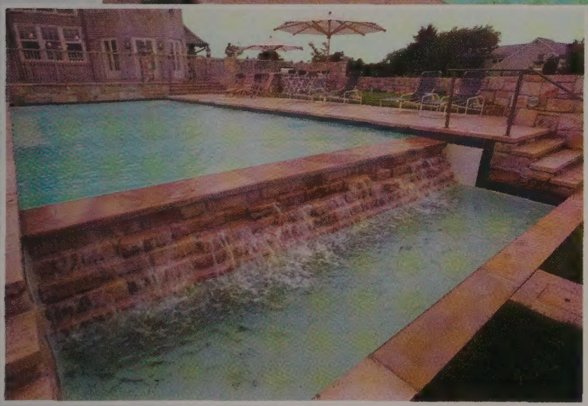
A Hampton's Estate without a pool?

It would be like Tiffany & Company without their diamonds.



This custom designed pool features in-water steps, underwater bench, and a "vanishing edge" that gently permits the water to cascade over natural stone into a lower reflecting pool.

J. Tortorella designers are the leaders in "vanishing edge" pools that create the visual illusion that the pool reaches out into infinity.

This J.Tortorella one-of-a-kind original is another perfect blend of environment, main residence and pool compound.
